Arnall Accuses Georgia Power Of Throttling State's Development, Threatens To Take Fight to Public

Flatly accusing Preston Arkwright and the Georgia Power Company of throttling Georgia's development, Gov. Arnall yesterday reiterated his charges that railroads and utilities are conspiring to block passage of the amendment which would allow governors to serve successive terms. Answering an earlier denial by Mr. Arkwright that the power company has taken any part in the legislative fight, Gov. Arnall said: "Recently Mr. Preston Arkwright saw me and stated, 'I want to come over to see you and talk with you about the Clark's Hill Power Project which is contemplated on the Savannah river. This public power business has gone too far. It's got to be stopped. I want to talk with you about it.' I told Mr. Arkwright that I would be glad to see him and accord him the same privilege that I accorded every citizen of this state to discuss with me any matter in which he was interested.

"On Monday of this week a member of the house of representatives told me that an officer of the Georgia Power Company told him that the amendment pending in the legislature should be defeated. When I got the information that an officer of the power company had undertaken to tell a legislator how to vote, and after I received other information about the activity of the power company, I called Mr. Arkwright over the telephone.

"DEALT FAIRLY"—ARNALL

"I told him that I was trying to make a good governor; that I had dealt fairly with business; that I had not recommended an increase of taxes on the power company; a reassessment of its property valuation, and neither had I requested the Public Service Commission to investigate its rates. I stated that I looked after my business and that I assumed the power company was looking after its business.

"Mr. Arkwright assured me that the power company was having nothing to do against the amendment. At that time I was forced to accept his statement. Later he had the officer of the power company call me and state that the report made to me was untrue by the member of the legislature who had told me what had happened. I accepted his statement.

"Yesterday (Tuesday) the same member of the legislature came back to me and said that in spite of what the officer of the power company had said, he had asked that the amendment to let the people elect whom they desire be killed.

"READY FOR FIGHT"

"At no time did I tell Mr. Arkwright over the telephone that I would 'gut' the power company. I told him that the time had come in Georgia to have a public power fight; that the power company had too long throttled the full development of this state and that if he was ready for a fight I was sure that the people of Georgia were ready to give it to him. Mr. Arkwright asked me if I were threatening him. I stated, 'I am not threatening you; I am merely telling you.' He told me that I had the power to injure or destroy his company. I told him that apparently was ready to allow settlement of the issue at the forthcoming general peace settlement.

An answer by Preston S. Arkwright, chairman of the board of the Georgia Power Company, to the renewed charge by Gov. Arnall, will be found on Page 2.

Oral Slugging Marks Legislative Battle

The legislative fight over the "draft Arnall" movement turned into a hectic battle of verbal slugging yesterday, with Gov. Arnall accusing his opposition of being a "coalition comprised of various candidates for governor, the railroads, the Georgia Power company, and some other public utilities who are afraid of the people and who desire to arrogate to themselves the right to say what the people can and cannot do."

His remark drew a quick and bitter retort from House Speaker Roy V. Harris, spearhead of the opposition in the legislature, and a denial from the Georgia Power Company that it was interested in the "draft Arnall" movement one way or the other. The power company said Arnall had threatened "to gut" it if the alleged opposition continued.

Harris asserted that "Little Boy Blue had lost his head and blown his top."

The title of "Little Boy Blue" was the one used by former Gov. Talmadge when he was campaigning against Arnall in Arnall's successful race for the governorship.

"PERSONAL FEUD"

The statements of the two—Arnall and Harris—were on a "personal level," with the Governor contending that Harris was speaker of the house by virtue of Arnall's friends, and Harris answering that "Little Boy Blue was perfectly satisfied with my services and my statesmanship before he lost his head. My statesmanship has gone down in his estimation when he put me in a position where I could no longer go along with him.

"So far as I am concerned, I am not in coalition with any corporations, any public utilities, or any candidates for governor.

"My only coalition is with members of the house of representatives, and there are enough of us in this coalition to defeat his campaign for re-election. He has seen the handwriting on the wall, and in his desperation, Little Boy Blue has blown the wrong horn."

Crux of the battle is a proposed amendment to the constitution to permit a governor to succeed himself in office. Arnall is fighting for the amendment, although he has not yet said whether he will seek re-election if it is passed by the legislature and ratified by the people in an Aug. 7 election.

In his statement, Arnall declared:

"As proof of my statement that the railroads, the Georgia Power Company, certain candidates for governor and some other public utilities have joined hands to defeat the will of the people, I will direct the attention of the people of Georgia to the roll-call vote when it is made in the senate and house."

Arnall contends that the session was convened on the call of the legislators who signed a petition knowing that the "draft Arnall" amendment would be submitted, that it would be the principal business of the session. He added:

CALLS ON VOTERS

"If the members of the general assembly fail to pass the constitutional amendment which they certified to me by a two-thirds vote that they wanted to pass, and fail to do the things for which they convened themselves, then the issue is one between those who failed to stand by their certificates and their constituents."

Calling on voters of the state to compare the names of those signing the call with the names of any voting against the amendment, Arnall declared:

"I want the people of Georgia to see how the railroad attorneys, the Georgia Power Company lawyers, those who represent certain other public utilities and the friends of the various candidates for governor vote on the proposal. The record will speak the truth."

AMBULANCE TO BRING OTIS BRUMBY TO CAPITOL IF HIS VOTE IS NEEDED

Rep. Otis Brumby, of Cobb county, is ready to go to the state capitol in an ambulance to vote for the constitutional amendment to permit Ellis Arnall to run for governor again.

Brumby has been bedridden in his Marietta home for more than a month with a serious heart ailment.

"If my vote is needed, and if my doctor permits, I'll go to the capitol in an ambulance to cast my vote for the amendment. I'm not interested in personalities or in Ellis Arnall's candidacy, but I believe that the people should have the right to decide this question."

HOTTEST FIGHT SINCE 1920

Arnall-Harris Rift Nears Head As Legislators Ready To Vote

By M. L. ST. JOHN.

Georgia's hottest political fight since the Tom Hardwick-Tom Watson campaign of 1920 will come to a head today when the general assembly reaches the voting stage on the proposed constitutional amendment to let Gov. Arnall succeed himself for another term.

In the fight hinges the political future of the dynamo from Richmond county, House Speaker Roy V. Harris, and the course of action which Arnall will follow for the rest of his term—and possibly another four-year term. These two, former political allies, are split wide apart, and are vieing personally for the legislative votes necessary to carry their respective aims—Harris to kill the amendment, Arnall to carry it.

Gov. Arnall, until yesterday content to let his friends and associates carry the fight, entered the fray himself, personally attempting to hold the necessary two-thirds vote of both houses for the amendment's passage.

HARRIS HITS PRESSURE

Harris, regarded as a gubernatorial aspirant and an almost certain candidate for the office had not the "Draft Arnall" movement come along, lashed at pressure being put on members of the assembly for their votes.

He said the pressure was coming from the Governor's office for "Little Boy Blue's campaign for re-election."

Harris' use of the term "Little Boy Blue" shows the personal stage to which the fight has grown between the two titans of Georgia politics.

He borrowed it from former Gov. Talmadge, whose downfall Harris once helped bring about and upon which he rose to power in the legislature. Talmadge used the term to describe Arnall when he was running against the present Governor three years ago.

Political observers do not expect the rift to end with the assembly's vote on the "Draft Arnall" amendment, no matter which way the vote goes, for the fight has reached such a stage that Harris and Arnall probably never will bring themselves together again as political allies.

But the fight, so far as Harris is concerned, is regarded as his "do or die" effort in Georgia politics.

Harris could win the amendment fight, but lose his control of the house to a large extent.

A constitutional amendment requires a two-thirds vote. Should the amendment fail by only a few votes, it would mean that a majority of the members voted with Arnall, and the lines drawn in the vote are expected to stand for a long time as a permanent line-up between Arnall and Harris.

A test of strength between Arnall and Harris in the house may come early this morning on something other than the amendment. The Governor yesterday told the house members that the speaker could not pass a single bill that would adversely affect the Highway Department, and he added that Harris was elected speaker on the strength of his friendship with the Governor.

Recounting that his strength helped elect Arnall governor, Harris said he might carry out his threat to offer a bill reorganizing the Highway Department. He made the threat Tuesday when he said he found highway board members putting pressure on legislators.

Harris said an Atlanta newspaper (not The Constitution) has carried names of the legislators signing the call, and this paper was now calling on the people to make these legislators vote in favor of Gov. Arnall's campaign for re-election because they signed the call. This the members will not do, because more than half of them said they signed the call under false pretenses from the Governor's office, Harris said.

"They tell me that they were told by M. E. Thompson, the Governor's secretary, and Little Jimmy Pippin, the Governor's high priced aide, that already enough of the members of the house and senate had signed the call to call the session and guarantee the passage of Gov. Arnall's campaign for re-election," the speaker continued.

"FALSE, UNTRUE"

"This they find was absolutely false and untrue. They feel that they have been tricked and misled and that the Governor's office has played fast and loose with the truth. Consequently they are entitled to be defended. They will stand fast and Little Boy Blue's campaign for re-election will go up in smoke in the house tomorrow."

In a reference apparently made to Speaker Harris, Gov. Arnall said: "As long as I am governor, I will be governor. I will not surrender that right to any man who undertakes to play on my team and at the same time is playing with the forces that have so long wrought havoc in the state."

The constitutional amendment comes up for final reading and debate in both the senate and house today, with both sides claiming victory. Both branches held brief sessions yesterday to read the amendment for the second time. Supporters of the amendment predict the session will end Saturday, the measure being passed in the record time of five days. Opponents think the measure will be killed and the assembly adjourned today.

Partly Cloudy, 88 High Forecast for Today

Little change in the weather is in sight for Atlanta today, the weatherman has predicted. A continuance of partly cloudy skies with low and high temperatures of 68 and 88 degrees is his forecast for the day.

Yesterday the minimum and maximum readings were 68 and 89 degrees.

Fighting Continues In Syria

French Battle To Hold Damascus as Near East Seethes

BEYROUTH, May 30.—(UP)—Lebanon tonight called volunteers to the colors as the explosive Near East situation grew more critical, and French troops, fighting Arab irregulars in Syria, were reported to have occupied the parliament building in the capital of Damascus.

Arab tribesmen, west of the Djebel Druse, were reported to have attacked French troops in Houran province and to have captured several garrisons. French officials here said they had lost contact with their outposts.

The situation was obscure, but it was feared that several thousand of the fanatic Druse tribesmen had risen against their old enemies, the French, with whom they fought a sanguinary war in 1926.

CALL FOR VOLUNTEERS

Although no direct government action had been taken by either of the Levant states against France, Lebanese President Bechara El Khoury signed a decree calling for volunteers between the ages of 18 and 35. Several bureaus were established to handle the "National Guard."

The fiercest fighting was centered at Damascus, where French troops employed warplanes as well as mortars and artillery in fighting the irregulars. The French said that Syrian gendarmes, backed by partisans, led the assaults against French positions in Damascus. The natives apparently had planned the attack carefully, one French official said, although there was "no reason to believe the Syrian government was involved."

Meanwhile, Syrian President Shuki El Kuwatly appealed to U. S. Minister George Wadsworth and British Minister Terrance Shone for immediate intercession. He also protested the French air bombardment of Damascus.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told commons late today that the Levant situation had "greatly deteriorated" during the past few hours and that the British cabinet was in session to consider what action Great Britain should take.

An American official in Washington disclosed that "high level" consultations were proceeding there in connection with the tense Levantine situation. It was understood that President Truman and the military high command were participating in the discussions.

DAMASCUS BOMBED?

Late reports said the fighting in Damascus had subsided somewhat toward evening but, with French forces holding the Syrian seat of government, it was believed that the battle was far from finished.

French planes were reported to have bombed and strafed both Damascus and the town of Hama, to the north. The reports were conflicting and one version was that only a single plane had attacked Damascus.

Parts of the Syrian parliament, the Syrian government house and the Orient Palace hotel in Damascus already had been damaged by shelling when the French broke into the parliament building early this morning after blowing up the front gate with a shell from a 75-millimeter gun.

Armed civilians were said to have launched another attack on the French barracks and troops in Damascus. Many were killed and wounded on both sides.

COMMUNICATIONS CUT.

Civilian communications between Damascus and Beyrouth were cut. The American legation here said that the U. S. consul in Damascus rode in a British armored car from the consulate to confer with President Kuwatly.

The explosive situation throughout the states of Syria and Lebanon stemmed from French demands for certain exclusive privileges in the two countries which they were apparently determined not to grant.

One report by the British Broadcasting Company quoted the prime minister of Syria as saying: "Our aim is to liquidate all our former relations with France. We shall not give strategic bases and there is no question of the French enjoying any privileges here which other nations do not enjoy equally."

SWEET PAYOFF—Sailor Nolan Truman Marks and his 18-year-old bride, Ann, had a hundred dollars and grand plans for a honeymoon. Instead, they were held up in Los Angeles and Mrs. Marks was shot through the thigh. Chicago Welcomes Gen. Clark and Party

CHICAGO, May 30.—(UP)—Gen. Mark W. Clark, conqueror of the Nazis in Italy, said tonight he believed that the Trieste situation would be settled amicably on the basis of compliance by Marshal Tito, Yugoslav leader, with Allied peace conference plans.

Clark, who was a Memorial Day guest of the city of Chicago, said at a press conference that Tito apparently was ready to allow settlement of the issue at the forthcoming general peace settlement.

"I was at Trieste three or four days ago and it was perfectly quiet then," Clark said.

Clark held the conference at the end of ceremonies at which he was given a roaring welcome back from the battlefields. He landed at the municipal airport this afternoon after a 28-hour flight from Paris.

He was accompanied by 52 other officers and enlisted men, veterans of the Italian campaign. The party was hailed by packed thousands who lined a 15-mile parade route. The parade ended at Congress plaza in the Loop, where 17 guns boomed out a salute for the heroes.

"We are deeply grateful for this fine tribute," Gen. Clark said. "But we also know that you are doing this to pay honor to the men still on the battlefields and those who never will return."

The enthusiasm was hushed for a moment when the general asked that one minute of silent tribute be paid the American war dead.

Thousands of spectators who waited for several hours at the airport for Clark's arrival roared their greeting when he stepped out of an Army transport plane.

The four-star general's wife and daughter were the first to greet him. Mayor Edward J. Kelly and high military and civic officials welcomed him to start an eight-hour tribute to the general and the members of his staff and enlisted men.

Clark made a brief address at a victory banquet tonight.

Sixteen P-40 pursuit planes accompanied the three C-54 transports that carried the 49-year-old full general and his party on the last leg of the trip from Europe.

99 PCT. SURVIVE GERMAN CAMPS

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—The American Red Cross said tonight that more than 99 per cent of United States prisoners of war in Germany have survived their hardships and are gradually returning home.

The high percentage, the Red Cross said in a general letter distributed to families of war prisoners, was due "in great part to the correct observance by the American Army of the Geneva convention."

"Much anxiety appears to have been caused in the United States by the lack of understanding of the difference between concentration camps and prisoner of war camps," the letter said. "The latter, so far as American and other Allied prisoners of war (except Soviet Russian) were concerned, enjoyed the protection of the Geneva convention."

South China Exodus Seen in Jap Retreat

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

American Marines and doughboys, slogging through deep mud and under torrential rains, drove ahead on bloody Okinawa today to close a pincer around Japanese Shuri garrison remnants. The Leathernecks had already planted the American flag atop the battered ramparts of Shuri fortress.

American gains on Okinawa and in the Philippines were matched by Chinese forces in their homeland and there were indications that the backtracking Japanese might be getting ready to abandon southern Asia by pulling out of Liuchow, their south China communications hub.

While reporting gains on Okinawa Adm. Nimitz disclosed that the Japanese made new suicide plane attacks on the American fleet off the island. The Nipponese fliers damaged two light units. Eight Japanese planes were shot down.

As the Marines slugged an encircling ring around Shuri and advanced southward toward the Kookuba river, doughboys on the left flank captured high ground near Yonawa. In the battle zone north of Shuri Japanese resistance was stiff. Okinawa was a sea of mud. The island has had 13.5 inches of rain in 11 days.

'SUICIDES' ACTIVE

In Washington American naval leaders said frankly they were worried about the ship repair problem on the U. S. west coast. They sounded an urgent appeal for shipyard workers to stay on the job and for others to engage in repairing ships damaged in the Pacific.

The appeal came as the Japanese again boasted that their suicide planes continue to crash dive on vessels off Okinawa.

Radio Tokyo acknowledged that the great American Superfortress fire bomb smash at Yokohama Tuesday, Japanese time, left a quarter million homeless and an unestimated number dead and injured. It said 60,000 houses were destroyed and that hundreds of doctors and nurses were rushed into the burned port city.

Tokyo listed seven additional Japanese admirals as killed in action and said three Nippon notables—the dean of empire diplomats, a bank executive and an international law expert—probably died in the Tokyo B-29 incendiary attack last Saturday.

CHINESE DRIVE AHEAD

An unusual meeting in charred Tokyo was reported by the Japanese radio—a session of government chiefs with a half dozen ex-premiers. The subject matter was undisclosed.

Amid indications that the hard-pressed Japanese might be preparing to abandon Liuchow, battle-hardened Chinese forces smashed along a 50-mile front toward the former American airbase. Great fires raged in the Kwangsi province rail center.

The Chinese plunged to the outskirts of Ishan, fortified stronghold 43 miles west of Liuchow. The Japanese were said to be evacuating points north and northeast of the burning city.

Some Chungking quarters believed the Japanese planned to abandon Liuchow as part of a general withdrawal from south China.

The Chinese, through capture of Nanning, had already severed Japan's primary land lifeline to southern Asia. But seizure of Liuchow would give them a stranglehold on all land links between China and Indo-China, Malaya, Burma and Thailand.

Chinese troops in the east coast province of Fukien captured Ningteh, 41 miles northeast of the liberated port of Foochow.

American bombers from the Philippines hit Indo-China's coastal railroad, sank two freighters at the mouth of the Yangtze and bombed air installations at Hongkong.

British Indian troops in Burma made gains in their drive to outflank the Japanese attempting to flee to Thailand. Other Indian forces broke up seven Japanese counterattacks in the Irrawaddy river sector where the Nipponese tried desperately to keep open their eastern avenues of retreat.

In the Philippines, American doughboys reduced Japanese pockets dotting the Luzon mountains near captured Santa Fe and liquidated some enemy remnants in the Wawa Dam sector of the Manila watershed. On Mindanao the Americans were driving to cut the western escape route from Davao.

Fuel plants, industries, railroads and Japanese troop concentrations were hammered by American airmen in sweeps over Formosa and Borneo.

Two Australian columns gained four miles each on New Guinea.

TWO EGGS PAY GI 'MIDWIFE'

OKINAWA (Delayed)—(AP) A former Dade county, Florida, deputy sheriff turned midwife today and received two fresh eggs in payment.

Pfc. David L. Ward, of Miami, Fla., had completed a tour of guard duty at a civilian refugee camp when a native boy came running and said: "Come quick, sister sick."

Ward, whose parents live at Mt. Jackson, Va., found the young woman in a shack. She was in childbirth pains. He successfully delivered a four and a half-pound boy and the grateful mother later insisted he take two freshly laid eggs.

Soong Raised To High Post

CHUNGKING, Thursday, May 31.—(AP)—Gen. Chiang Kai-shek resigned today as president of Executive Yuan (premier) and was succeeded by Acting Premier T. V. Soong.

Elevation of Soong to the full premiership raised the possibility he might attend any impending meeting of the Big Five leaders (China, France, Russia, United States and Great Britain). It also would give him greater face if he makes an expected visit to Moscow on his way back to China from the San Francisco conference.

Wong Weh Hao, minister of economic affairs and head of China's war production board, was appointed vice premier, succeeding H. H. Kung.

FEWER MEAT BALLS

Meat Supply Down for June; Ration Points Remain Unchanged

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(UP) Weekly supplies of meat for civilians will be slightly less in June than in May, OPA said tonight in announcing that point values for most meats, fats and oils will remain unchanged.

OPA Administrator Chester Bowles estimated that meat sold over the counter in retail stores during June would be seven per cent less than this month.

June meat supplies were estimated as follows: 73,530,000 pounds of beef compared to 80,220,000 in May; 23,040,000 pounds of veal compared to 17,730,000 pounds in May; 11,010,000 pounds of lamb compared to 11,670,000 pounds; 2,190,000 pounds of mutton compared to 1,110,000 pounds; 91,240,000 pounds of pork compared to 103,590,000 pounds.

Point values of most pork cuts, beef, veal, lamb and mutton, and all kosher meat will remain unchanged.

Fatbacks were increased three points to eight points a pound; plate bacon was increased three points to eight points a pound. Pork sides, aged and dry-cured, were increased one point to nine points a pound.

Lard, shortening, salad and cooking oils will remain at 10 points, margarine will remain at 12 points and creamery butter at 24 points a pound.

The point values will be effective from June 3 to June 30.

The supply of creamery butter for June is expected to remain at about 80,000,000 pounds. Farm butter is expected to increase about 3,000,000 pounds, making the estimated supply for June about 32,000,000 pounds. Farm butter generally is sold within state borders and only a small amount is sold to consumers.

The total supply of lard and cooking and salad oils for June will be about 20 per cent less than that available this month. There will be about 98,700,000 pounds of lard in June compared to 130,300,000 pounds in May.

OPA reduced the point value of soft perishable types of cheese from eight to six points a pound to assure faster selling of available supplies during the hot weather. Estimated supplies of cheese for June are as follows: American cheese, 36,000,000 pounds; all other cheese, 30,000,000 pounds.

GERMAN PRISONERS REAPING HARVEST OF DEADLY MINES SOWED IN FRANCE

PARIS, May 30.—(AP)—German prisoners of war will remove the remainder of their minefields in Europe.

This was disclosed today by Lt. Col. Edgar Morris, Columbia, S. C., following a ceremony in which American and French Engineer Corps exchanged insignia.

Col. Morris said demining tasks which Americans and French have been performing since D-Day are being turned over to German teams. Instruction literature is being printed in German. Some American and French troops will supervise the Germans' work.

Morris organized the demining work for engineers in this theater and will leave immediately for the Pacific to study Japanese technique.

Arkwright Answers Governor's Charges

Preston S. Arkwright, chairman of the board of the Georgia Power Company, in a statement last night, answered the renewed charge by Gov. Arnall that the Georgia Power Company is fighting the constitutional amendment. Following is Mr. Arkwright's statement:

"On the basis of Gov. Arnall's new statement, his accusation seems to boil down to a claim that one Georgia Power Company official asked one member of the legislature to oppose the constitutional amendment. We deny even that.

"As to my personal attitude, since the Governor is trying to make an issue of it, I am glad to repeat that I have not opposed the constitutional amendment. I am not now opposing it, and I do not intend to oppose it. The same applies to the Georgia Power Company.

TALK AT CLUB

"At the Piedmont Driving Club Tuesday evening I told a few of my personal friends about my telephone conversation with the Governor that morning. I was indignant about his threats against my company and I expressed my indignation. That is the only basis for his claim that I made 'vicious remarks.'

"Immediately after the telephone conversation I had with the Governor, I dictated a statement recording the conversation. That statement expresses my attitude toward him and the issues which he is trying to raise without provocation from me. I offer it herewith for such interest as there may be in it."

"MEMORANDUM OF TELEPHONE CONVERSATION WITH ELLIS ARNALL, GOVERNOR:

"Gov. Arnall called me, P. S. Arkwright, on the telephone at 9:45 this morning, Tuesday, May 29. He said, in substance:

"'In this meeting of the legislature which we are having today I am interested in having the amendment passed by the legislature. Representatives of your company are working against the passage of the amendment, communicating with members of the legislature and asking them to vote against it, which is in direct opposition to what I am trying to do and what I think is in the interest of the state.' He said he had called Fred Wilson and was told that Mr. Wilson was out of town.

"I asked him who the representatives of this company were who were working against the amendment. He said J. J. McDonough, of Rome, was one; that Mr. McDonough had telephoned a member of the legislature and asked him to vote against the amendment.

"I asked him who else. He said he was not at liberty to tell me the names of the others.

QUOTES ARNALL

"He stated that he had not done anything to injure this company; that he had not advocated public power; that he had not put any additional taxes on us; but that if we were going to run counter to what he desired of the legislature he would start to 'gut' us; that he would advocate public power and competitive electric light plants, and do everything in his power to see that we were punished.

"I stated to him that this company, regardless of his threat, would take no part in this matter; that the matter didn't concern it, and its policy was to keep hands off in political matters of this nature particularly; that if any representatives of the Georgia Power Company had tried to defeat the amendment. I would see that they stopped it; that if Mr. McDonough called anybody to ask them to vote against the amendment I was not informed of it; that if he did it at all he did it in his personal capacity and not as a representative of this company, but I would ask him to stop it; that if there were any other members of this organization who were soliciting votes against the amendment, if he would let me know who they were, I would get them to stop also.

"He said, 'Well, Mr. McDonough is one of your vice presidents, and when your vice president does a thing of that kind it's an indication that your company is doing it and procuring him and your other representatives to do it.' I told him that wasn't true, but, nevertheless, notwithstanding his threat, I would see to it that no representative of this company took any part in the matter at all. He stated that it wasn't a threat; that he was just telling me what he was going to do; that he was over there tending to his business, and that he thought I ought to stay out of his business. I told him I had no particular interest in it; that I had had a high regard for him; that I knew that as Governor of the state he had the power to injure or destroy this company, but from what I did know of him I didn't think he would be guilty of that kind of conduct; that it was contrary to what I thought his character was. He said, 'Well, I just called you up to tell you.'

"This ended the conversation.

"J. M. Oliver and C. B. McManus were in my office at the time and they heard my end of the conversation, and say that it is correctly stated in substance in this memorandum.

McDONOUGH VISIT

"Subsequently J. J. McDonough came into my office. I told Mr. McDonough the Governor's statement about him. In answer to my questions, Mr. McDonough stated to me that he did not ask anybody to vote against the amendment; that he did not get anyone to ask any member of the legislature to vote against the amendment; that he had not made any public expression of opposition to the amendment; that he felt no interest whatever in the amendment and had had nothing to do concerning it.

"I then called the Governor and had Mr. McDonough talk to him over the phone. In this conversation Mr. McDonough told him that he had not made any effort whatever to get anyone to vote against the amendment and that if anybody told the Governor that, it was not true.

"Subsequently I talked to the Governor. The Governor thanked me for having Mr. McDonough call him, stated that he had a high regard for Mr. McDonough; that he would believe any word he said, and he said that he was sorry he had stated that Mr. McDonough had done this.

"P. S. ARKWRIGHT.

"Atlanta, Ga.

"May 29, 1945.

"This statement was dictated immediately following the conversation, the dictation being completed by 10:05 a. m. May 29, 1945.

"P. S. ARKWRIGHT."

ASSEMBLY WISHES TRUMAN TO SPEAK

President Truman will be invited to address a joint session of the Georgia general assembly under a resolution passed by the senate yesterday and sent to the house for concurrence.

of the board of the power company, declared there was no justification for "dragging the Georgia Power Company into this situation." His full statement was:

"Dragging the Georgia Power Company into this situaton, as the Governor has done, is wholly without justification and can have no purpose but to create prejudice.

"The Georgia Power Company has not taken sides in the amendment fight. It has not participated, and is not now participating, in efforts to kill the amendment.

"I told this personally to Gov. Arnall yesterday. On Tuesday morning, the Governor telephoned me at my office. He made this same accusation, that we were trying to kill the amendment, and he said that he intended to 'gut' the Georgia Power Company, to punish us.

"I told him his accusations were a surprise to me, and I gave him a direct denial that the company was participating in the fight. I told him that I had no particular interest in this matter one way or another; that I had had a high regard for him; that I knew that as Governor of the state he had the power to injure or destroy my company, but from what I knew of him I did not think he would be guilty of that kind of conduct; that it was contrary to what I thought his character was. He appeared to be satisfied.

"Later I had the individual in this company whom the Governor had specifically accused communicate with him. After talking with him, the Governor stated to me that he believed fully what the gentleman had said and expressed regret that he had unjustly accused him."

FIGHT

ently he had the power to injure or destroy the rights of the people.

"On Tuesday night, May 29, at the Piedmont Driving Club, Mr. Arkwright made vicious statements critical of me and my administration and said that the amendment should not be passed and that I should not be elected for another term.

"Based on his statements, what has happened and what is happening, I renew my charge that the Georgia Power Company is trying its very best to prevent the people of Georgia from voting for whom they desire and is undertaking to control Georgia politics.

"It is quite possible that the Securities and Exchange Commission will want to investigate their operations in political activities. Speaking as past president of the Georgia Power Company and as newly-elected chairman of the board, I assume that Mr. Arkwright's attitude can be construed as meaning that the power company is fighting against the amendment to the constitution giving the right to the people to vote for whom they choose for governor.

HARRIS "SINGING SONG."

"It is quite obvious from Speaker Harris' statement in which he calls me 'Little Boy Blue' that he has adopted a former governor's nickname for me. Many people have been suspicious for several weeks that the speaker is singing the song of a defeated candidate for governor. Now, I think they know it.

"I have no personal controversy with the speaker but I reiterate my charges that the railroad lawyers, the power company attorneys, and those who represent forces which are anxious to take the state back to its past political embroilments will vote to defeat the amendment.

"So my message to the people of Georgia is: 'Watch the roll call vote. See who ducks and dodges. See how the railroad lawyers and power company attorneys vote. Watch how the political hopeful friends of candidates for governor vote—and the whole story will be a public one.'

"I again dare the speaker to agree to submit the amendment to the people and let them vote. He knows that if the people vote they will pass the amendment.

"The railroads are still mad about our freight rate fight."

Freight Rate Bypass 'Plot' Faces U. S. Probe

Wendell Berge, assistant United States attorney general, has informed Gov. Arnall that the Justice Department will begin an immediate probe of charges that the railroads are attempting to bypass the ICC ruling equalizing freight rates.

Gov. Arnall made the charge in telegrams to President Truman and Attorney General Francis Biddle. Berge said he had Arnall's message and one from J. G. Kerr, of the Southern Freight Association, who denied Arnall's charge.

President Truman's secretary, William D. Hassett, wrote Arnall that his wire to Truman had been turned over to the attorney general.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backach and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills

U. S. Exports To Triple 39's After War

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—The State Department predicted today an annual $10,000,000,000 postwar export trade for the U. S., triple that of 1939.

Assistant Secretary William L. Clayton told the Senate Finance Committee this was a logical expectation, provided congress grants proposed new tariff cutting power to President Truman and sanctions full American participation in the Bretton Woods world financing plan.

Clayton said the administration needs the extended tariff power to promote wider trade, and that it in turn would be reflected in greater prosperity at home.

Clayton was the first witness in the senate hearings on the three-year extension of the reciprocal trade agreement authority. The legislation was passed by the house last week.

The wider authority would allow trade agreements reducing tariffs 50 per cent below the level of January, 1945.

Clayton reiterated that United States dollars will be needed to finance the war-torn nations. Where tariffs can be cut without injuring American business, he said, those same dollars will be returned in increased purchase of American goods.

He said it would be "many years" before Germany, Japan, China or Russia will be "serious competitors" for the American market and declared that the 11-year-record of the reciprocal trade plan has "failed to turn up" a case where an American industry was injured.

Sen. Bailey, Democrat, North Carolina, offered an amendment which would forbid lowered duties on strategic materials, contending that the nation should develop these wartime-needed commodities at home as fully as possible.

Sen. Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts, said he heard that Russia proposes to increase its 10,000,000-ton steel output to 60,000,000 tons and asked if eventually the Soviet union would be a serious competitor.

"Russia will expand very greatly," Clayton said. "But I do not fear them as a competitor in the world market for many years to come. They never were a great factor in international trade and they are committed to develop their own country."

CAMP ATLANTA IN FRANCE TO HOLD REDEPLOYMENT KEY TO HOME OR JAPAN

"Camp Atlanta," one of 17 camps being established in central France to speed the redeployment of troops to other theaters, shares the task of starting nearly 300,000 soldiers monthly on their way home or to the Pacific theater, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Paris.

All 17 camps, named for American cities, will be operated by the newly-created Assembly Area Command. The other 16 are Camps Baltimore, Boston, New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Norfolk, Miami, Detroit, Chicago, Oklahoma City, Washington, San Antonio, St. Louis and New Orleans.

First to be established is Camp Baltimore, which will get its first shipment of soldiers during the first half of June.

Big Shippers Cool On Chattahoochee Plan

By DUPONT WRIGHT

While many Atlanta and Georgia shippers are enthusiastically cooperating in the plan to make the Chattahoochee navigable all the way from the Gulf to this city, some of the largest remain apathetic.

This was said to be in part due to the shortage of help, especially of traffic experts. However, when shown that the economic future of Atlanta and the state are at stake, it is thought that enough evidence to show the Army engineers the necessity of a nine-foot channel to Columbus will speedily be gathered.

"The Army engineers will be surprised when they see our figures," E. I. Hart, of the Atlanta Freight Bureau, said yesterday.

SURVEY UNDER WAY

He said that C. V. Harris, vice president of Harris & Company of New York, and two of his engineers, A. W. Keller and Don P. Roberts, already are in town and have begun the Chattahochee survey for which the county and city have jointly appropriated $30,000.

"We shall show the Army engineers," said Harris, "that there is plenty of tonnage here to amortize the $23,000,000 additional that will be required to build multiple dams, that is, dams with locks, instead of ordinary power dams they have already proposed."

In recommendations to congress for inclusion in the rivers and harbors bill, the Army engineers already have proposed to deepen the channel from five to nine feet between the Gulf and Columbus and to erect power-producing dams above Columbus to control the flow of water.

TONNAGE SURVEY

The purpose of the Atlanta tonnage survey is to prove the desirability of including locks with these power dams to permit barge traffic from Atlanta. It is 418 miles from Atlanta to the Gulf along the Chattahochee.

Hart pointed out that Birmingham, 419 miles from the Gulf, already has a barge channel via the Warrior and Tombigbee rivers to Mobile. In other words, Birmingham shippers have a great advantage over those of Atlanta as the result of this inland waterway which gives them entry to the southwest, the Caribbean and South America.

He further said that the Army engineers have approved a waterway development between Montgomery and Mobile and a canal from the Tennessee river to the Warrior.

"We are facing a serious problem of competition," he added.

She is a county chairman in the 4-H organization and is girls' secretary of the Rock Chapel club.

Pharmacists Oppose Bill On Licensing

A bill to license graduates of correspondence schools of pharmacy in Nevada, to be voted on today in the Georgia house of representative, is bitterly opposed by the Georgia Pharmaceutical Association as discriminatory and as jeopardizing the professional standings of 1,400 Georgia pharmacists.

As is the case in all but two states in the Union, Georgia requires its pharmacists to receive four years' training in an accredited school.

"Should this bill be passed," said R. D. Rainey, secretary of the Georgia Pharmaceutical Association and publisher of the Southeastern Drug Journal, "reciprocity with other states is eliminated and a Georgia pharmacist going to another state would be unable to obtain a license. It would lower the standards of the profession in Georgia to those of Nevada.

The bill, introduced by Reps. Holley and King, of Augusta, reportedly was designed for the benefit of a young Augustan.

Carolina Firm Buys Newspaper In Augusta

AUGUSTA, Ga., May 30.—(AP)—Announcement was made today of the purchase of the Augusta Chronicle by Southeastern Newspapers, Inc., a local corporation chartered by superior court of Richmond county.

The new corporation is headed by Herman A. Moore, Charlotte, N. C., as president. The Chronicle will be published by the Chronicle Publishing Company, a partnership composed of William S. Morris and his wife, Florence H. Morris, under a lease from Southeastern Newspapers, Inc.

Morris has been publisher of the newspaper for many years under the ownership of the International Paper Company and will continue as publisher under the new ownership and management. He has announced that there will be no change in personnel.

Moore is widely known throughout the Carolinas, Georgia and Alabama, where he has many business interests, particularly automotive sales and financing. He is president of Auto Finance Company, which owns the Bon-Air hotel, an old Augusta institution. In addition to these business connections, he is interested in the Bank of Greenwood at Greenwood, S. C., and the Carolina National Bank at Anderson, S. C.

Moore said that his company was making this purchase purely as an investment and that the publication was entirely in the hands of the Chronicle Publishing Company.

The Augusta Chronicle was acquired by the International Paper Company back in 1929 through Harold Hall and William Lavarre, who came south at that time to purchase a string of southern newspapers with money lent them by the International Paper Company. They purchased along with the Augusta Chronicle and about the same time the Columbia Record, the afternoon newspaper in Columbia, S. C., and the Spartanburg Herald and Journal, both morning and afternoon, in Spartanburg, S. C.

The sale of the Augusta Chronicle brings to a close the ownership of these newspapers by the International Paper Company, as the Spartanburg properties were sold to Smith Davis and William Townes, of Cleveland, Ohio, and the Columbia Record to the State, the morning newspaper of that city.

City's Printers Fete Visitor From Capital

Atlanta's multi-million-dollar-a-year printing industry last night paid tribute to John J. Deviny, of Washington, deputy public printer, at a dinner at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

Here in connection with the presentation of awards to nine Atlanta printing firms and two Georgia firms, Deviny was guest of honor at the affair attended by representatives of the industry in Georgia.

Hosts were the Atlanta Master Printers' Club and the Atlanta Club of Printing House Craftsmen. Present were representatives of the companies receiving the government certificates of merit—the "E" awards of the printing industry—and others associated with the graphic arts.

Master of ceremonies was Wingate Jackson, manager of the Ruralist Press. Brief talks were made by representatives of the companies receiving awards, as well as Leslie Hubbard, president of the Atlanta Master Printers' Club; C. M. Wilson, president of the Atlanta Club of Printing House Craftsmen, and John M. Cooper, of Foote & Davies.

A special guest was Mrs. Harriett Mae Judd, for many years secretary of the Atlanta Master Printers' Club. Deviny came here Tuesday and has already presented seven awards. He will present the other awards today, and then return to Washington.

TRUMAN MAKES AGED PAIR PROUD

MILL GROVE, Mo., May 30.—(INS)—A letter from President Truman was one of the cherished possessions tonight of William F. Linville, 98, and his wife, Mary, 90.

The President congratulated the couple on their diamond wedding anniversary and told them he "should like to join with your friends in extending congratulations and very best wishes to you."

Linville, a Civil War veteran, and his wife eloped 75 years ago and were married by a rural minister. The couple has eight children—the oldest 73; 20 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Commissioners Okay Plan for Federal Inmates

The Fulton county commission yesterday approved a contract made by the U. S. Department of Justice with Sheriff A. B. Foster for the detention and maintenance of federal prisoners at the county jail for a period from July 1, 1945, to June 30, 1946.

According to the contract, the government will pay the county $1 a day per prisoner and 60 cents for the keying in and keying out of prisoners.

The contract was made after a group of federal prisoners housed at the county jail had petitioned that the food was unfit to eat.

The notice received from the Department of Justice did not state whether any investigation of jail conditions had been made.

The commission also approved the appointment of Paul Webb, Atlanta attorney, by Solicitor General E. E. Andrews as an assistant in his office at a salary of $460 a month. Webb will fill the vacancy left by Andrews when he was elected solicitor general.

Arnall To Speak At Meeting on Rehabilitation

In observance of the 25th anniversary of vocational rehabilitation services, the State Department of Education will sponsor a conference Saturday at the Biltmore hotel to be addressed by Gov. Arnall, Michael J. Shortley, director of the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation has announced.

The meeting—to be called to order at 10 a. m. by Paul S. Barrett, state director of vocational rehabilitation—will hear Dr. M. D. Collins, state school superintendent, deliver an address of welcome.

Another principal speaker will be O. E. Myers, regional director of the United States Civil Service.

The conference, to include a luncheon at noon, will be held coincidentally with the beginning of National Rehabilitation Week, which was proclaimed by President Truman.

At the afternoon session addresses will be made by W. W. McKay, chairman of the State Board of Vocational Education, who will speak on "Our Vocational Rehabilitation Program"; Dr. Paul Chapman, of the University of Georgia, and others.

During the fiscal year of 1943-1944, it was announced by the education department, 2,771 cases were rehabilitated at a total cost of $301,718—the average cost per case being $108.

Their annual earnings were listed as $4,925,740—an annual average earning of $1,777.60.

Three Sentenced In 'Race' Trial

Maximum sentences of 12 months on the public works, six months in jail and a $1,000 fine were meted out in the city court of Decatur yesterday against J. R. Walden, Bernard L. Mitchell and A. V. Smith, all involved in the May 21 "death race" on the Buford highway which resulted in the death of J. B. (Buddy) Boling, 26, of Clermont hotel.

Judge Frank Guess, of Decatur city court, has issued a bench warrant against Roy Hall, the only member of the group allegedly involved in the race who is still at large.

Maj. C. A. Williamson, of the Georgia State Patrol, reported a patrol car spied Hall in an automobile near Gainesville last Friday, but after leading the patrolmen across an open field, a pasture and through a barbed-wire fence, the wanted man escaped.

Russia Blocks Frisco Action On League Issue

SAN FRANCISCO, May 30.—(AP)—The United Nations' conference hit its first snag at higher levels today when Russia blocked commission action on a proposal governing election of the principal officer of a proposed world league.

The commission took up a report from one of its committees outlining the broad authority that has been mapped out for the general assembly of the new world organization. It quickly approved recommendations that all organization members also should be members of the assembly and that the assembly admit new members upon recommendation of a projected security council.

Then the commission broke into a round of debate on election of a secretary general for the new organization. The committee had proposed that he be elected by the assembly upon recommendation of the security council.

Jan Christian Smuts, South African prime minister and president of the commission, ruled that it was understood the asembly could accept or reject the candidate picked by the council.

But Russia prevented commission acceptance of the election formula. Her delegate, K. V. Novkov, said Russia had taken the matter up with the conference steering committee and wanted action postponed until it heard from that agency. Smuts upheld hi point.

This was the first committee operating under the commission to turn in its conclusions. One other made an interim report.

To Continue the OPA

The Senate Banking Committee has demonstrated commendable realism in voting, 10 to 5, to recommend passage of legislation continuing the Office of Price Administration until June 30, 1946.

The OPA admittedly is far from perfect. In addition to errors of judgment, it has been guilty at times of almost inexcusable blundering. And yet the fact remains that its overall record is good, that it has done a better job than any similar agency in any other war.

Moreover, the rationing and price control phase of our wartime economy must be continued for months after the last shot has been fired in the Pacific. Not even were the war to end tomorrow would it be wise to continue the OPA for only another six months, as some Republican members of the committee sought to do.

Certainly the OPA should not take congressional continuation as blanket approval of all its policies. It must make a genuine and continuing effort to perfect its workings. But OPA will be continued for the very simple reason that it is the best available agency to do a job which is —and will continue to be—a very important phase of our homefront war effort.

Realism Is Good Sense

Russia has called up, for peace-time training, her youngsters of 15 and 16 years of age. They will receive a period of instruction from experienced soldiers and then return to their usual routine of life.

One may call this militarism, realism or good sense. At any rate, it is Russia's decision that she will train, and maintain, an army adequate for any emergency of the future.

No one in this country would advocate training boys of so young an age. But the difficulty is that in this country there is a considerable force of pacifists who don't want us to train anyone at all and who oppose the proposed national training act for young men of 18 or 19.

Our generals, and a great majority of our soldiers, believe in and urge such a program as vital to our future. Against it is the specious argument, entirely unsupported, that military training contributes to a lowering of the moral code and reduces the cultural level. The facts seem to be on the other side. The health, morals, habits and intellectual level of this present armed force are at the highest peak of any we have ever had. And the services are responsible for most of this improvement.

A Threat to the Sick of Georgia

Would you want your sick child or sick members of your family to take medicine and drugs compounded by a person who had been trained only 90 days by mail—by a mail order house in Nevada?

A quiet little measure, House Bill No. 3, which has slipped by two readings with no protest made, provides just that.

It provides that graduates of this 90-day mail order school of pharmacy recognized by Nevada shall be allowed to practice in Georgia.

Georgia, careful of its sick, demands a full college course of training for its pharmacists.

The Association of Pharmacists, jealous of their good name in Georgia, is up in arms and will make a hurried protest and appeal to the legislature. The bill had been kept a secret from them.

It is almost incomprehensible such a tricky, dangerous bill should be slipped in without regard for the sick people of Georgia. It was shrewdly and cleverly disguised.

The claim is made for it that it is for the benefit of one man.

The facts are it would open the doors to any and all graduates of this little 90-day correspondence school.

In the name of the sick and those who will be sick let us call on the legislature to rise up and put down this dangerous bill which would turn over the handling of dangerous drugs and medicine to men trained for a mere three months—by mail.

The Obliteration of a Clown

While British desire to dispose of William Joyce, alias Lord Haw Haw, by condemning him as a traitor, is understandable, it would seem to be a mistake to attach too much importance to his capture on Monday last.

After all, Joyce is a person of no importance whatever. His war role, when he made his daily radio broadcasts from Berlin, was but that of a rather crude clown. He was so regarded by the bulk of the British people, to whom his broadcasts were beamed. He may have, at times, wrung the hearts of families which had lost loved ones, when he boasted about the blitz against England in 1940-41.

But, generally speaking, his broadcasts were so palpably false, his falsehoods so absurd, he became a sort of comic-relief amid the tragedy of war to most Britishers.

His insignificance calls for nothing more than insignificant elimination of "Haw Haw" from the scene of things mundane. It would seem to be out of proportion to dignify, with the pomp of trial for treason, the end of a jester in radio motley.

State Emergency!

Editor Constitution: There is an emergency in state affairs in Georgia at present. The legislature and the people must overcome a spiritual weakness being injected into our government by a few selfish politicians who do not appreciate courageous leadership and do not trust the people.

I am a young Democrat and a veteran of War II. I have come into contact with many servicemen and veterans from all parts of the United States; and I can sincerely report that Gov. Ellis Arnall, of Georgia, stands as high in their estimation as any state official in our nation. Every enlightened citizen can appreciate what Gov. Arnall has meant to Georgia by merely comparing the progressive accomplishments of his administration with the dark days that threatened Georgia democracy under some past governors.

When a people have a good and faithful servant as Georgia has today, it would be treacherous hypocrisy for us to strike him down and thereby provide a springboard for a return in Georgia of governmental conditions we have so proudly eradicated through the leadership of Gov. Arnall.

The people must decide this thing; and if the legislature gives them the chance, they will indorse for another term—the leadership they are now privileged to enjoy. Georgia's returning servicemen will need the vision of Ellis Arnall to aid them and their state in the difficult postwar years; and they must not be denied it through a stifling of the voice of its people.

Proved Champion

Editor Constitution: There is one good reason among many for Gov. Arnall to succeed himself. His great accomplishment in alleviating the freight rate situation alone justifies an indorsement term. While a victory has already been won, much remains to be done before the differential is removed. We need a man in the governor's chair who can carry this fight to a finish.

The south has been poor for a long time and while some of our ills are our own fault, there are many handicaps that have been imposed upon us by the east. We have suffered from high protective tariffs, unequal freight rates, patent monopolies and many other ills. Gov. Arnall has become our champion and he knows the technique of leadership—how to get things done. There is no doubt that we have other good men, but when we have a proved champion who is doing something about our ills we should not let him relinquish his post while there is still so much to be done. A great economic development program is under way in the state and it can mean much to Georgians if Gov. Arnall is allowed to carry on. Never has so much been done toward the solution of southern and Georgia problems in so short a time as under Ellis Arnall. Let's keep him on the job and carry this program to fruition.

Pleasing Article

Editor Constitution: Please allow me to commend the associate editor, Mr. Ralph T. Jones, for his thoroughly delightful editorial on heroes which was published on May 26. I think it was one of the most pleasing short articles which I have read in many months, and it was true from the beginning to the end. I smile as I note that among hero worshippers, he left out fathers. This is my only criticism.

Job for Housewives

Editor Constitution: In January of this year Sen. Maybank introduced a bill, S-195, which will allow coloring to be added by the manufacturers the same as butter is colored when made. I ask that each housewife, who has this task imposed upon her by selfish interests, get busy and write a post card to her representative in Washington, demanding that they free us from this unnecessary job. If we all do this we will get results.

The Issue of The Special Session

Georgia's legislature will debate, and may ballot today, on the proposed amendment to the constitution which would allow Georgians to re-elect a governor as they are permitted to re-elect a representative, a mayor, a United States senator or congressman.

A great many persons are confused because, unfortunately, the average person pays little attention to politics.

Here are the A B C's of the measure which will be debated today and which may be decided by legislative ballot.

The committee revising the constitution included a provision that no constitutional amendment may be voted on, if the new constitution should be adopted in the balloting on it next August, except at the time when the legislature is being elected. That would mean every two years.

It was charged that this was a trick by foes of Gov. Arnall to prevent a legislature friendly to him presenting such an amendment to the people in 1946, permitting Gov. Arnall then to become a candidate.

Oddly enough, this provision seems to have gone largely unnoticed. Gov. Arnall was not offering as a candidate and did not have any desire to offer.

Nevertheless, various members of the legislature, despite the fact they could get no encouragement from him, and discovering this clause in the new constitution, met and decided to act. They were of necessity hurried because the law further provides any constitutional amendment must be advertised nine weeks before the election at which it is before the people. They had to have a decision before June 6.

Led by Ben Fortson, of Washington-Wilkes, the legislative committee obtained more than the required three-fifths majority in each house. The Governor had no alternative but to call the special session. The law requires him so to do on presentation of a petition signed by three-fifths of each house.

Chief Fact Now, here is the one, and the only one issue and fact. The legislature cannot decide whether Ellis Arnall will be a candidate for governor. I want to set this one fact in this one paragraph. There has been an earnest effort, somewhat successful, to make people believe the legislature is deciding only about Ellis Arnall. It is not and cannot. IT CAN DECIDE ONLY WHETHER OR NOT IT WILL PERMIT THE PEOPLE TO VOTE ON THAT QUESTION IN AUGUST. THAT IS ALL. It is unthinkable that representatives elected by the people should refuse to let the people vote on an important issue. But that is what this legislature will do if it defeats this proposed amendment. It is not deciding anything about Ellis Arnall. It cannot. It is deciding whether or not it, the legislature, will permit the people to decide.

Battle Joined Speaker Roy Harris, who possesses more political "know-how" than any other one man in Georgia, opposes the amendment with all his very considerable skill.

Now, here is a fact which should cause the legislature itself, which has been one of the best the state has had from the standpoint of legislation, some concern.

Who has joined in with Speaker Harris?

Publicly there have joined him followers and supporters of all the old demagogic elements which for years robbed Georgia, corrupted her institutions, and made her name a byword among self-respecting people.

It is a political fight. Speaker Harris, having chosen his position, naturally accepts all the help he can get. No one can criticize him, as a politician in a political fight, for riding any horse that will come along. It does not necessarily mean he has thrown in his lot with them. It does mean they have joined him. Their leaders are spending money, pulling strings and working hard to prevent the people from getting the right to express their wishes.

Why? The people have a right to ask why the old crowd, which for years corrupted and disgraced the state, are trying to persuade the legislature not to let the people vote.

They see in this fight a chance to get their foot in the political door. They don't care about Speaker Harris or the good name of the state. They are pleased he has left the Governor, hope he ruins himself. They want to get back in to loot and intimidate; to ruin the schools your children attend, and otherwise act as before.

The people of Georgia have appreciated, I believe, good government. None can deny they have not had good government.

They will want to know what influences are afraid to let the people say whether they want to re-elect not merely Gov. Arnall, but any other governor of the future.

If the measure should fail by lack of a two-thirds majority, the people will expect Gov. Arnall to assist them in finding some clean, able man to be their candidate next year. We do not believe the people, should the legislature deprive them of their right to vote, will surrender to the "same old crowd" that for years brought disgrace and ruin to the state.

It is important to keep in mind this fact . . .

Plus the fact that the legislature can decide only whether it will let the people decide . . . or not.

Geography Lessons About Pacific Needed

They say public interest in the war with Japan is more intense in the far west than in our own eastern part of the country. Not having been west since the war began, I couldn't comment on that report.

However, it is obvious that, among most of our people, the Pacific war does not touch our emotions so sharply as did the war with Germany. Of course, it is scarcely necessary to interpolate that there are numerous exceptions to this general rule, the exceptions being the families and friends of men who are fighting in the Pacific struggle. It is real enough to them, we know.

But it would require a particularly unobservant and obtuse individual not to feel a sense of let down, of lessened impact of the war news, since the war with Germany came to an end.

There are a number of more or less obvious reasons for this. There is one reason which, as an observer on the sidelines, I think is important and worth some discussion.

That is, the lack of knowledge as to the geography of the Pacific area, of China and of the whole scene of the far-flung combat, combined with the terrific distances involved.

We Knew Europe Most of us, when reading dispatches from Europe, knew pretty closely where the various cities or towns mentioned are located. We could approximate, in our mental map of Europe, the location of Aachen, of Cherbourg, of Strassbourg and Breslau and Rostock and Murmansk and Pilsen, and etc., etc., etc. At least, with the aid of the maps of the various areas published in our newspapers, we could follow the strategy and the tactics of the European campaign with intelligence and realism.

We just can't do that, in many instances, when we read reports of battle developments in China or among the scattered islands of the Pacific. Most of us can't picture, as we read, the strategic importance of the capture of Nanning or Pingyiang or some other oddly named—to us—town in China. We haven't, as a matter of fact, a workable idea of China as a whole, geographically, and we have difficulty remembering the comparative location of the various provinces, let alone the towns.

Yet the place is so huge it is extremely difficult to draw a map which will give the detailed information we require and at the same time show the strategic relationships of a localized campaign to the whole.

Again, there is the difficulty, with so large an area, of picturing the relative positions, in their interlocking importance, on a flat map. So much of the globe's area is involved we should, really, try to picture it on a globular trajectory, if you get what I mean.

We could, of course, use a globe, which can be purchased in any book or map store. Then we run smack into the old difficulty of the unavoidable lack of detail.

Names in the News You would think that almost everybody would by now have a reasonably good idea of the geographic location of some of the places which have been prominent in the news. Such as Okinawa, Iwo Jima, the Ryukyus, the Aleutians, Formosa, Burma, Malaya, Singapore, Guam, the Marianas, and so on.

Yet a recent survey by the Gallup poll revealed only one-third of the people questioned knew where Okinawa is, while only 14 per cent knew that Singapore is in British Malaya. Speaking of Singapore, here are some of the answers to the question as to where it is located: China, Burma, England, India, France, South America, Manila, Europe, somewhere in Africa.

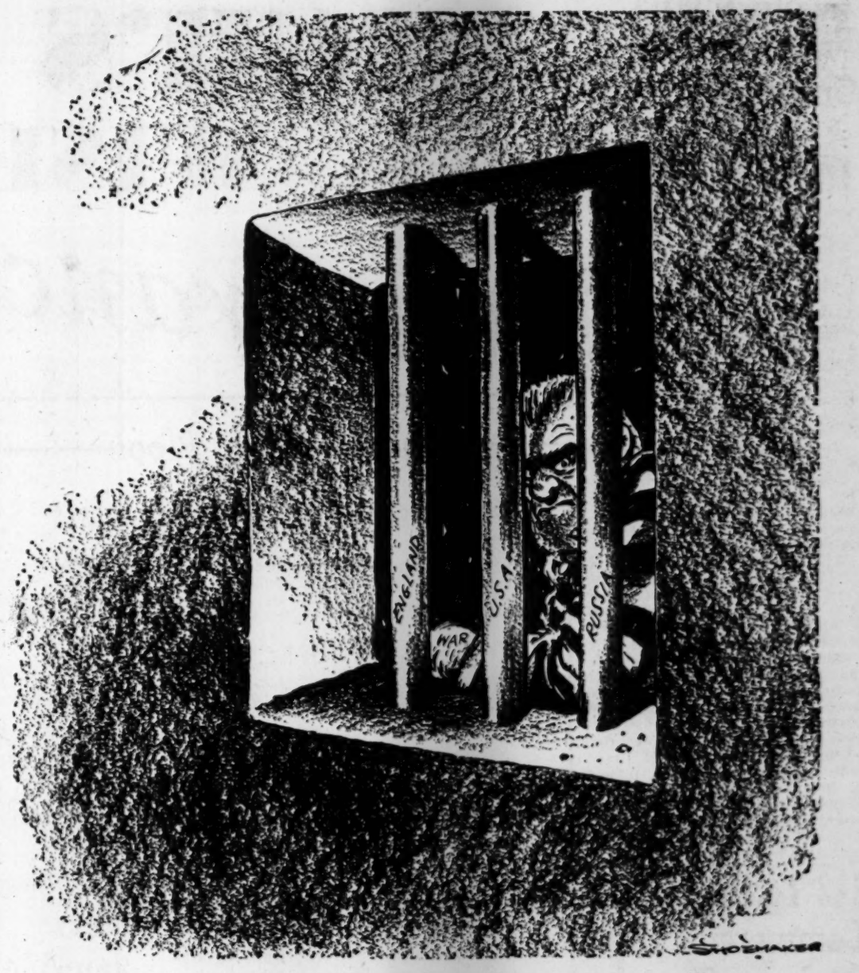

Don't laugh, because you went to college and have an idea it is only uneducated persons who would give answers like that. Only 37 per cent of college graduates knew where Singapore is.

Guam, as you should know, is Adm. Nimitz' advance headquarters. Yet only 28 per cent of the persons polled knew where it is and less than half of the college graduates knew.

If it is important for homefront morale that our people realize to the full the difficult and desperate struggle still ahead before the last member of the Axis is crushed, it seems to me necessary that, somehow, some intensive lessons in the geography of the East be given.

The best way, I believe, would be through familarity with maps of the area. But, as said, it is extremely difficult to combine detail with comprehensive coverage of the war area. The newspapers, I know, will do their best by publishing the best maps they can find.

But there still remains the perplexing problem of how to teach our people, generally, where Tarakan is and why it is important to our coming victory. (Tarakan adjoins Borneo. Now, students, where is Borneo?)

War III Disaster

The Third World War began without notice and without warning. It began with weapons already invented before the Second World War ended, but improved beyond recognition and developed into instruments of incredible destructiveness.

The sky was filled with rocket bombs that crossed continents and seas. Giant planes, hidden in the stratosphere, dropped bombs that shattered cities like an earthquake.

Peace-loving nations, unprepared as usual, were quickly crippled, and people died by millions.

But the spirit of free men cannot be broken. They organized quickly, built factories and transport lines underground, and rounded up or killed enemy paratroops.

In the third year the conquerors, and then the Allies, began to use a deadly gas, which seeped into underground factories and mines. Fields of grain were burned in summer and forests in winter. Rural regions were drenched with gas, and pastures sprayed with poison, and horses, cows, sheep, swine and poultry died in the field or in their shelters. No village escaped destruction.

The conquerors, using night-flying planes, dropped millions of destructive insects, Mediterranean fruit flies and mosquitoes that carried the deadly African form of malaria. They poisoned open reservoirs of water. And the Allies retaliated in kind.

As the fourth winter approached, the people of once-civilized lands were dying of starvation. Some hoards of food remained, but there was no means of transportation for food or fuel. It was the coldest winter in history, and people weakened by hunger died in countless millions. Those who did not freeze died of typhus, cholera, bubonic plague and other contagious diseases that raged unchecked all over the world.

Spring came and the grass grew and birds flew north to nest. But nothing moved in the wreckage of cities and towns except rats and a few wild dogs. From swamps and mountain caves, little groups of ragged skeletons came out to the highways. They could not communicate with others far away. The world as far as they could see was theirs, for they alone were alive to rebuild civilization.

GEORGIA EDITORS SAY:

STAYING IN OUR PLACE.
(Chatsworth Times)

Recently someone asked why The Chatsworth Times does not print a weekly summary of the war news.

While it is our desire to give the best possible service to Murray county, we cannot, nor can any weekly newspaper, hope to compete with metropolitan dailies in supplying the latest spot news of national and international importance. We cannot even compete with weekly news magazines which review the week's events, mostly with pictures dispatched at lightning speed by wire and radio from the four corners of the world.

However, there is one thing we can do that the dailies, the radio and the picture magazines can't, or don't do. That is to give you as complete a picture, an accurate report on all local news of importance.

We believe that most of our readers take daily papers or listen to daily news broadcasts on the radio. It would be unfair to them to use our limited space to repeat the news they knew days ago.

In short, we know our place and we intend to stay in it. Frankly, we think it is a pretty good place.

Both Ends Against the Middle

The laundry situation may be critical. But a mess of dirty linen is currently being washed at Georgia's state capitol.

After several years with their arms around each other's shoulders, Gov. Arnall and Speaker Harris are now at each other's throats.

Familiarity not only breeds contempt, it also provides ammunition. On only one thing are the Governor and speaker in agreement: What this nation needs is some one-way mud.

Speaker Harris is opposing the move to lift the ban so governors can serve consecutive terms. The Japanese commit suicide with a knife.

Arnall has not said he will run if the ban is lifted. But if not, he sure expresses academic interest fervently.

I don't know who'll win this setto, but it doesn't take three guesses to tell who it is running up and down the sidelines, snapping his red suspenders and hollering "Lay on MacDuff" out of both sides of his mouth.

GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

Higgins' Proposal For Vice Presidency

WASHINGTON—Andrew J. Higgins, the dynamic New Orleans shipbuilder, has come forward with a constructive proposal for dealing with the vice presidency.

Almost no change has been made in the duties of the office of vice president since the founding of the republic. Its functions are about the same they always were.

Except in unusual times, such as marked the Roosevelt third term, the vice president serves no useful part in the government. His sole constitutional responsibility is to preside over sessions of the senate, a function that might easily be dispensed with. Even there he has a vote only in case of a tie, which comes rarely and often on matters of unimportance.

The senate could just as well elect its own presiding officer, as the lower house does and as the senate itself has been compelled to do a number of times in the past and at the present time. For when the president dies and the vice president succeeds him, the office of vice president ceases to exist until the next following presidential election.

In other words, the office as presently constituted amounts to nothing more than a useless appendage, except and until the President dies or is incapacitated. The incumbent is merely a benchwarmer in anticipation of that tragic event.

Appropriate Time Mr. Higgins, in calling attention to these facts, suggests that now, when we find ourselves without a vice president, is an appropriate time for congress to re-examine the duties and responsibilities of the office, and enact legislation to meet the requirements of the situation.

The vice president, he insists, should actually be an assistant to the president, as the title implies. Here is the way he puts it in the blunt language of a businessman:

"Let the senate elect its own presiding officer and have the vice president at the White House where he belongs, instead of listening daily to senatorial oratory which, interesting though it may be at times, is not sufficiently important to claim all the working time of the No. 2 official of our government."

In a business organization, he points out, the vice president is an assistant to the president As such he relieves him of much of the burden and detail of running the company. Moreover, he gains a practical administrative experience which prepares him for taking over the direction of the company, if and when a change is made in the presidency.

Training About the only training a vice president of the United States gets is through attending cabinet sessions. And even that is a comparatively recent innovation.

If the office were something more than merely a title of succession, there are many things an incumbent could do to make the presidency less exacting. If nothing else, he could relieve the president of the necessity of seeing so many people.

The demands made upon a president's time are enormous. No chief executive has ever been able to meet them. He could devote 18 hours a day to conferences alone and never get caught up on the important requests that are made for his time.

In addition to his cabinet and the various bureau and agency heads, a president has to maintain regular contact with foreign diplomatic representatives and the various party leaders in congress. Not only that, but he must be accessible to business interests and party workers from over the country.

Finally, there are certain social traditions about the White House that must be maintained. It all boils down to just one thing: The office of president is so vast in its ramifications that no man should be required to carry the burden alone. Congress should make statutory provision for a proper division of authority.

Now is a fitting time, as Mr. Higgins says, for our lawmakers to re-examine the subject. We have no vice president at the moment to consider in connection with the question, so that we can fit the office to the needs of the country rather than draw up specifications to fit the capacities of one man.

The proposal is one that should commend itself to thinking members of congress.

THOMAS L. STOKES

Truman Capitalizing On His Opportunities

WASHINGTON—President Truman, by a combination of native finesse and circumstance, is building himself up politically to such a nice head-start for 1948 that it is making Republicans sit up and take notice.

After last year's election, in which they crept up close to the Democrats, the Republicans had figured that 1948 certainly would be their year. They figured on a natural reaction against a party long in power, on an expected swing of the political tide at the end of a hard war, and on the disturbing problems of a postwar period, problems difficult to handle to the entire satisfaction of anybody.

But they are beginning to wonder now about this man Truman.

He inherited the mantle of President Roosevelt by fate, and he is wearing it in a progressive style, but he didn't inherit the resentment and bitterness which attached to the late President.

This has been a break for Mr. Truman and he has capitalized on it.

Some of its advantages became apparent recently. For example, when President Roosevelt a few years ago sent to congress a proposal for reorganization of the government to make it more efficient, there were shouts of "dictator." His enemies' lamentations were phony, but they were loud and fooled lots of the innocent.

President Truman sent up a request for presidential powers to reorganize the government after the war emergency more far-reaching than those suggested by President Roosevelt. It caused hardly a ripple. It was, in fact, received favorably in general. There were no moans. This does not mean, of course, that congress will speedily enact it. Every senator and house member has his pet bureau—perchance one well-stocked with his own patronage—and there will be demands for exemptions from abolition or transfer here and there. But nobody calls Mr. Truman a "dictator" for asking it.

Another example is President Truman's invitation to ex-President Hoover to consult with him at the White House about the food problem, the first time Mr. Hoover had set foot there since that raw March day in 1932 when his term ended. Nothing like that ever happened in Mr. Roosevelt's time. No invitation would have been extended, nor would one have been accepted.

Yet Mr. Hoover knows a lot about distribution of food, and his counsel should have been sought long ago.

The President followed this up by asking in Messrs. Dewey and Landon, thus deftly making a nice gesture to Republicans.

With his right hand, so to speak, he has been cleverly doing things that Republicans have been advocating, such as a readjustment of the executive machinery to bring under regular government departments such of those special bureaus which are being retained. Republicans have been frothing for a long time over those "dangling participles."

He has been considerate of congress and smart about it, too, as, for instance, by picking men who had service and experience there for two of his three new cabinet officers.

But, with his left hand, he has been putting in some licks with a progressive smack, such as his resistance to "letting off the brakes" on taxes and price control, his demand for more adequate unemployment benefits during reconversion, and his successful fight in the house for the reciprocal tariff program which already has put Republicans on the defensive, judging from reaction from the country.

He is conservative in ways that please his own party as well as Republicans. He is progressive in directions that will please New Dealers and hold rank-and-file support.

WESTBROOK PEGLER

Reminiscent Observations

NEW YORK.—It didn't seem possible to me that, after all this time, any boss unioneer would have the effrontery to tell an audience that the so-called Wagner act did not force people to join unions because for years now, most of them haven't bothered to deny that it does but have insisted, instead, that this is all right. But the other afternoon there comes over the air a Clyde-Side burr, doing one of those question-and-answer acts in which the trainer throws the sea lion a fish and the orator of the occasion then smacks his flippers together and barks and carries on with long-winded answers out of the book and who is it but Johnny Green, of the CIO shipbuilders, arguing against himself.

Johnny Green is one of them that I have never met, personally, but it was only a year or so ago that a not untoothesome little number engaged in the press-agent business and hired to do a job for his union called on me to explain what a dirty trick the U. S. government had played on him and his by giving an exclusive, closed shop contract to the boilermakers' union of the AFL for all the jobs in Henry Kaiser's big shipyards on the Pacific coast. Not only was Green having routine Communist trouble in his organization, but those Communists were beating the ears off him for letting the AFL round up several hundred thousand suckers in the big western yards who had had to join the boilermakers to get jobs and now had to keep in good standing to hold the jobs.

The loot was something on the colossal side, a fact of special poignancy to a unioneer coming, as Johnny Green does, from Glasgow, for the chumps, mainly unskilled hands from the dust bowl and sheepers drawn from their flocks in Montana, not only had to pay stiff dues but, under the contract approved by the government, also had to buy life insurance through the boilermakers.

This insurance gag paid a tremendous rake-off to a fellow named Franklin, the son of the president of the boilermakers, which, in a CIO union, might have been applied to some worthier purpose, such as the PAC or Russian relief and the young publicity wench was moaning low over the foul injustice of it all.

In the course of the inquiry I called on old Henry, himself, at his New York office which, in a way, reminds me of some of the earlier speakeasies because it is a sort of hide-away without letters on the door, and Henry confirmed all. But, hell's bells, Henry had only wanted to slap steamboats together in great haste and numbers and it hadn't made no nevermind to him which union got the graft as long as he could do business with some high-powered slave-trader which would deliver the faceless hordes to him in the enormous numbers, take responsibility for their conduct, see that they didn't strike and agree with him on the rates of pay. The slaves were not consulted. They weren't even human beings in the sense of individuality but just labor in the collective sense and the fact that the Portland, Ore., padrone of the boilermakers wouldn't even let them come into their guady temple, built with their dues and assessments, was no affair of Henry's.

The better you know Henry the easier it is to understand how he can contribute his presence to adorn an occasion in honor of Henry Wallace, as Kaiser lid that night last January when the totalitarians got together to fan soup and tear up turkey wings and holler up his ambition to get his hands on the billions of the PFC. To Kaiser, people are the masses and he can be generous and get along just fine with the unioneers for the same reason that, in his own phrase, F. D. Roosevelt got along just fine with Joseph Stalin. Whatever they want they get and the taxpayers pick up the checks and this, of course, makes Kaiser a great liberal and a progressive industrial genius and accounts for his popularity with the unioneers.

Johnny Green, however, was in a peculiar situation. His was a new union and the boilermakers is a very old one and used to be a decent labor organization run for the welfare and protection of the members who also built our ships in the old days. The bosses of the west coast boilermakers had seen the opportunity and moved in quickly and old Henry, not wanting any mess or shortage of hands, had given them a contract at a time when actually only a skeleton force was employed. This contract, however, contemplated compulsory membership for countless and, as yet, unseen migrants from the inland and, as Johnny Green was now contending, they were written or dragooned into the boilermakers before they ever thought of going to the Pacific coast. And now that the boom was on, Johnny couldn't pick up a nickel and he was howling for a labor board election and democracy and the four freedoms.

But he never got anywhere and even if we agree with him that, by this time, the majority wanted to quit Kaiser's company union of the AFL and come over to the CIO, we have to agree with him also that the Wagner act, under which this exclusive contract was made, held them captive and had been the means of herding them into the AFL in the first place like African slaves into the compounds on the ebony coast 150 years ago. That is precisely what he was yelling at the time the ideology babe came asking me to right a horrible wrong.

I offer these reminiscent observations for their value as information about the honesty of those who get on the air with scenarios intended to convince you that something isn't so that they were bitterly proclaiming to be a ghastly fact only yesterday.

". . . the millions of faithful employes, reporting daily for their work, refute the statement Americans want something for nothing."—From labor article.

For every pleasure in our lives there is some price to pay,
And, though we wish the planners had rigged up a better way
Than putting price tags on each joy or little bit of fun,
We have to pay the fiddler when his fiddling is done.
The man who labors with his hands gets lots of exercise
Which gives him health and appetite, two things we greatly prize,
While those who fill the higher spots and ride the swivel chair,
And never have to work in rain or frigid winter air,
Must pay for these small luxuries by often feeling dull,
With weak and flabby muscles and an aching in the skull.
Someone will rise to greater heights and know the thrill of fame
And right away some jealous one sets out to smear his name . . .
Then, there's that little bit of heaven sent us from above
That sweet, that hellish, lovely, awful thing that's known as love;
It may last just a week or two, it may endure for years,
But you have to pay for every smile with buckets full of tears—
Yet all of it is worth the price, the toil, the tears and strife,
But there is no Bargain Basement in the Business of Life.

DOROTHY THOMPSON

We're in Default of a Policy

SALZBURG—A more prolonged visit to Austria convinces me, whereas the military have done a magnificent job and are still doing it within strictly limited objectives, our political policy is practically nonexistent and may yet undo the work of the military.

Actually both responsibilities are in the hands of the military commanders and governments, but without adequate political directives or with directives apparently contradictory to those which the civilian authorities are supposed to be carrying out, there is simply no integration between the military and political authorities. The latter appear to be in the hands of such agencies as clutter Washington, none with a clear line to which it is disciplined with the result that the agencies, even the individual ones, are pursuing their own policies in the same or different places.

This is obvious in the parts of Austria occupied by our armies or in those parts, notably in Salzburg province, which I have visited for longer than a stopover between airplanes.

The creation of a free and independent Austria was an established policy at the highest levels as far back as the Moscow conference. Obviously that policy demands Austrian political organizations and the population as a zealous implement for it and, if possible, a common procedure amongst the three great allies who are dividing the country for occupational purposes between themselves and supposedly should have conjoined in its capital, Vienna.

When our troops marched into Salzburg the tide already had risen and Salzburg was there to be taken at flood. Whatever the previous leanings of the population may have been, the Nazi disaster produced an immense swing in public opinion. Throughout the city the Austrian national flag flew from almost every house and the Austrians who had been silent underground during the years after the Anschluss came out to welcome the American liberators. There could have been staged in those first days a general festival of joy which would have, temporarily at least, swamped the Nazis and given the change an enthusiastic start.

But the military orders were to treat the Austrians as a part of conquered Germany with all German directives applying here. The first move was to order Austrian flags removed and replaced with white flags or none at all. Troops, as in Germany, were ordered to observe non-fraternization so Austria's own policy received a cold douche at the outset.

No proclamations declaring Austrian freedom have been posted to this day, no newspapers have been published, and no radio is operating, so the population does not know its status. No one in our part of Austria has read the San Francisco news, or except by word of mouth, has heard of the death of Hitler, Himmler, or Goebbels, or the finding of Goering's huge loot, or Himmler's million-dollar cache, or the rescue of Schuschnigg, or the graphic accounts of Buchenwald and Dachau.

The military government proceeded, as under orders applying in Germany, to disarm Germans, to track down war criminals, which is being done with admirable skill and the thoroughness of a purge. The offices, first at the top and gradually downward, are being cleared of Nazi officials, a move which also is being carried through conscientiously.

Salzburg is the seat of municipal, district and provincial governments and the Nazi officers have been replaced by old Christian Socialists which, before Hitler, was the dominant party hereabouts. They head the provincial government temporarily, since it is hoped to be able to obtain the release from the Russians of a man in charge at the time of the Anschluss who was highly popular, but who was found in a Berlin cellar.

But half a dozen citizens whom I interrogated in Salzburg had no idea even who the new mayor is. The people are living in a political vacuum. The only radio they can listen to is from Graz and Vienna, occupied by the Russians, who put on liberation programs interspersed with music.

The problems of the military government are prodigious, encompassing feeding the people and returning displaced persons who in Salzburg province vastly outnumber the indigenous inhabitants, including the tens of thousands of Germans.

Positive political activity was supposed to begin with the arrival three or four days ago of a gentleman from the psychological warfare branch charged to start a newspaper and set up a radio station. But he is not an officer and is not a part of the military government and I have a strong impression he is not an envoy of real co-operation since his policy contradicts what already has been established.

The State Department officials are hanging fire until the Russians admit us to Vienna even though they are unrepresented in all places where we do occupy, and the psychological warfare officials seem to tie in nowhere. If under these circumstances Russian influence engulfs the American, it would be silly to blame the Russians whose political and military policies are completely integrated.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

Discusses Articles IV, V of New Constitution

(Editor's Note: The League of Women Voters has pointed out that it considers the proposed constitution an improvement over the present one and advocates its ratification in spite of the fact that the revision is far from complete.

(The proposed constitution contains 15 articles. This is the third in a series in which the League will explain all proposed changes in detail. Articles IV and V are covered today.)

ARTICLE IV.—PUBLIC UTILITIES, EMINENT DOMAIN, POLICE POWERS.

1. Entire article reworded and rearranged.

Considerable rearranging and rewording is done to this article to bring it up to date. Sections which, under the present Constitution, refer only to railroads are reworded to refer to all public utilities.

2. Utilities owned by municipalities and counties not subject to regulation.

Regulation of public utilities is not to extend to those owned and operated by municipalities or counties, unless, as a later section provides, they are financed by revenue-producing certificates and are operated outside of its own boundaries.

3. Terms of the members of the Public Service Commission changed.

At present the members of this commission do not take office until 11 months after they have been elected. The change will affect those now in office, but as soon as the adjustment is once made the terms will continue to be for six years. (This will eliminate lame-ducks.)

4. Reports of insurance companies changed.

Under the present Constitution insurance companies are required to make semi-annual reports to the Governor, who turns them over to the comptroller. The new provision requires annual reports directly to the comptroller.

5. Section dealing with obligation of contracts omitted.

This is another effort to make it possible to subject the Georgia railroad to state taxation.

ARTICLE V—THE EXECUTIVE.

1. Governor's salary increased in future.

The Governor's salary is increased from $7,500 to $12,500 beginning with the next Governor.

2. Position of Lieutenant Governor created.

A Lieutenant Governor is to be elected at the same time as the Governor and he is to act as the president of the senate with an annual salary of $2,000. In case of the death, resignation or disability of the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor succeeds until the next general election, at which time his successor is elected by the voters.

3. Special sessions of the general assembly called by Governor limited.

Special sessions when called by the Governor are limited to 70 days unless an impeachment trial is pending. The present Constitution places no limitation on the length of such called sessions. Special sessions when convened by the general assembly continue to be limited to 30 days.

4. Commissioner of labor and commissioner of agriculture made constitutional officers.

Under the present Constitution, these officers are elected by the people, but the offices exist by law and are not provided for in the Constitution. At present such offices can be changed by a simple act of the legislature.

(The League of Women Voters favors shortening the ballot in state elections by providing that all administrative officers, such as the two mentioned above, be appointed rather than elected. In this way the people could hold the elected policy-determining officials such as the Governor and the legislators responsible for the running of their government.)

5. Regulation regarding fees in addition to salaries changed.

The present Constitution provides that no state official is allowed any compensation from the state other than his salary, except traveling expenses. Under the new Constitution this would apply to Constitutional officers only.

6. Board of Corrections created.

A new section provides for a State Board of Corrections to have charge of the state penal system. It shall have five members appointed by the Governor. The first appointees are to have terms of uneven length. After that the terms will be for seven years. The board appoints the director of the department. The compensation of the director and members is to be fixed by the legislature. (This is an attempt to free the prison department from as much political interference as possible.)

7. A State Department of Veterans' Service created.

This, too, is to consist of seven members appointed by the Governor for staggered terms. Vacancies are to be filled by the Governor.

SARA LAWSON McGINTY

She Missed the Hodges Parade

CHATSWORTH—I am still a little limp from welcoming Gen. Hodges to Atlanta. Though the general didn't see me and I didn't see the general, I was there, pals, and I have some confetti on my hat to prove it.

My mission to Atlanta was primarily for a dental appointment, but I was pleased to learn the big celebration for the First Army heroes was planned for the same day. I would have something to tell the folks at home about. I might be able to tell them that the general waved at me, or even that I shook hands with him. After all, I do know the general's brother, John, and some of his nieces and nephews. Who knew but what I might accidentally bump into them in Atlanta, and they might insist that I come along with the family to welcome one of the nation's great military leaders?

Ah, what pleasant things can take place in the imagination!

Here, alas, is what did happen.

When I reached Peachtree street at about noon crowds were already lining the curb and leaning against buildings. I leaned for a little while, then decided the parade couldn't possibly appear before 1 o'clock, so I would get some shopping done before the stores closed.

My purchases were not many, but they included a graceful, long-stemmed caladium plant, something I had been wanting all spring.

Only a narrow passage remained down the middle of the sidewalk for pedestrians who insisted on moving about. These restless creatures received cool stares from the stationary citizens. About this time I realized I was hungry. My judgment told me the parade wouldn't arrive before 1:30, so my next decision was to grab a bite to give me strength to get through the rest of the day. Eating was no pleasure, however, when I was panicky for fear the parade would pass while I ate.

The next time I reached the sidewalks, they were really jammed—not like jelly that could be shaken around a little, but like olives that have to be plucked out of a jar. My arms began to ache and I became warmer than I have been since last September. Then, to my horror, I realized I should be on the other side of the street. The time for my rendezvous with the drill was drawing nearer. If I were only on the other side I could be making toward the Hurt building, my destination, while I waited for the parade.

I wouldn't have had the courage to try crossing alone, but when a determined woman pushed by, saying to a policeman, "Please, may I cross the street? My car is parked over there," I wedged myself behind her. The officer gave her the go signal and told the Boy Scouts to let her through. "Me, too," I said apologetically.

The crowd was not so obliging as the cop. One young man loudly said, "Is this trip necessary?" And someone, despite my apologies, gave me a reprimanding pinch.

Eventually I landed in the doorway of a drugstore. A nice woman standing atop a small stepladder offered to let me stand on the bottom rung of her ladder. Later I wished to heaven I had remained there, but after 10 minutes in that spot I again became alarmed about tempus fugiting and decided to press my way nearer my destination.

Just below the Paramount theater I was stopped, and down in a hole where I could see only shoulders and heads of those around me. In a moment a shower of new confetti came down and the shouting became louder. I judged the parade was actually passing. In almost no time the crowd began dispersing and I could move again.

Earlier in the day I had passed a group of soldiers, one of whom had said, "It can't be any good without the Navy."

Whether one of these sailors, or another with the same sentiment, decided to do something about the situation, I don't know. But anyway, as I walked wearily on, I heard a new wave of cheering and laughter.

Coming down the middle of the street, still cleared of traffic, was a blue convertible with top back, driven by an attractive girl. Standing in the car, waving and smiling to the crowd was a young sailor.

I would have thrown him a kiss, if I had had a free hand. He was the only parade I saw.

BOB HOPE

It Says Here

WASHINGTON—This is probably the most military town in the world. Even the bellhops in my hotel salute each other. At dinner tonight my waiter spilled soup in my lap and the maitre 'd didn't say a word to him. He just ripped off the waiter's chevrons, handed him a pistol and pointed to an empty room. In fact, an officer can't stand more than two years here. After that he gets "salute silly" and starts standing at attention when Boy Scouts pass him.

Everywhere you look you see an officer. This afternoon I saw a major get on a street car and the motorman outranked him. And there's a lot of competition between the Army and the Navy. The other day the Navy ran its biggest battleship up the Potomac so President Truman could see what they are doing. It didn't work though . . . the Army sent over so many B-29s that their exhausts blew the ship right back into the Atlantic.

The baccalaureate sermon at 11 a. m. Sunday will be delivered by the Rev. James A. Jones, pastor of Myers Park Presbyterian church, in Charlotte, N. C.

Other main events of the commencement program are the annual meeting of the alumnae association scheduled for 2:15 p. m. Saturday, and class day exercises in the May Day dell at 4:30 the same afternoon. A program of music will be presented at 8:30 p. m. Saturday in Presser Hall.

All commencement exercises are open to the public.

European Trip Seen In July by George

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—Another group of senators laid plans today to visit Europe.

This delegation, from the Foreign Relations Committee, will leave early in July if the legislative situation permits.

Acting Chairman George said Majority Leader Barkley had told them there is a possibility the senate may take a recess in July, in which case the committeemen will go across to familiarize themselves with the general European situation and with foreign service problems.

From seven to 10 members are expected to make the trip.

Four committees of senators now are outside the United States.

Classmates, Barbecue Await Hodges at Perry

Gen. Courtney Hicks Hodges, commander of the famed United States First Army, comes to Perry today for a welcome home from the people of the town and county where he was born and reared.

The man who led the victorious First Army in the Allied crushing of Germany will be given a home town welcome by the men and women with whom he went to school and by other residents who have grown up since the general went to the wars.

In Perry lives the general's mother, now 89 and an invalid. She will be unable to participate in the formal ceremonies but will receive the general and the general's wife at her home. His elder brother, John Hodges, is ordinary of Houston county and publisher of the weekly paper, the Houston Home Journal.

Also living at Perry are three sisters, Mrs. T. D. Mason Sr., Mrs. Sam P. Houser and Mrs. T. L. Hendrix.

STREETS DECORATED

A grandstand has been erected in front of the Perry school and exercises will begin there with a band concert at 4:30 p. m. The formal ceremonies will open at 5 p. m., with welcoming speeches, followed by an address by Gen. Hodges. Later there will be a private barbecue at which admission will be by card only.

Streets and buildings have been decorated for the occasion.

Seated on the grandstand will be seven classmates of Gen. Hodges from the grammar and high schools of Perry. One of them now lives in Richmond, Va., and will be on hand to make one of the welcoming addresses. He is Jack C. Holtzclaw, president of the Virginia Light & Power Co.

The program will open with the singing of "America" led by George F. Nunn with the Robins Field band accompanying. The Rev. J. B. Smith, pastor of the Perry Methodist church, will offer the invocation.

BRIEF WELCOMES

Brief addresses welcoming Gen. Hodges will be delivered by J. A. Davis, chairman of the Houston county board of commissioners; Col. Thomas H. Chapman, commanding officer of Warner Robins Field; Mayor Charles L. Bowden, of Macon; Mayor A. C. Riley, of Fort Valley, a classmate of the general's at the Perry schools; Samuel L. Norwood III, on behalf of the school children of Houston county; E. T. Staples, superintendent of Perry schools; F. W. Hickson, county school superintendent; B. H. Andrews, commanding the local post of the American Legion; Lt. Dan L. Brandt, representing the men in the service; G. F. Nunn, representing Perry Kiwanis Club, and Mayor Sam A. Nunn, of Perry, representing the home folks.

J. T. Etheridge, chairman of the War Finance Committee of the 13th district, and Mayo Davis, chairman of the War Finance Committee of Houston county, will urge the supporting of Gen. Hodges by the purchase of war bonds.

Mayor Sam Nunn, who will act as master of ceremonies, will present Gen. Hodges. The general will respond to the address of welcome.

The benediction will be pronounced by the Rev. James A. Ivey, pastor of the Baptist church. Col. Chapman is sending a military escort for the general from Robins Field. Saturday the general and Mrs. Hodges go to Birmingham, Ala., for a celebration.

Princess Engaged

LONDON, May 30.—(AP)—Engagement of Princess Xenia, 26-year-old daughter of Prince Andrew of Russia, to Lt. Cachoun Ancrum Jr., of the U. S. Army, was announced today. The Princess, now a British subject, is the granddaughter of the Grand Duchess Xenia, sister of the late Czar. Ancrum is the son of the late Col. Cachoun Ancrum, of the U. S. Marines.

Military Needs Now Greater for Textiles, Leather

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—Military demands for cotton textiles and leather products are greater now than they were for a two-front war, the government said today in predicting a tighter civilian pinch.

Requirements for these materials are at a record high, said War Production Board Chairman J. A. Krug, who also painted a bleak outlook on supplies of wool textiles and knit goods.

Krug reported that in textiles the problem is mainly a manpower shortage, complicated by the attraction of workers to higher-paying industries.

Miiltary allocations for shoes and other leather items for the current and third quarters have been 30 per cent above the 1944 use rate, the production chief said.

The shift to a one-front war, Krug said, requires a substantial amount of clothing materials to "fill the pipelines to the pacific" for "soldiers who must fight under varying climatic conditions." He gave this picture on textiles:

Cotton Goods—Third quarter military allocations are expected to be 85 per cent of the cotton duck supply, 20 per cent of other carded goods, and almost 50 per cent of combed goods, which are the finer and more durable fabrics. Over-all war requirements are about 15 per cent higher than the 1944 quarterly average.

Wool Woven Goods—The military will take about 60 per cent of the supply in the third quarter, but will take virtually all of the worsteds, except for a small amount allocated for the gabardine shoe program and children's wear. This will leave for civilians only about one-quarter yard of wool woven goods, as compared with normal needs for three times that much.

Knit Goods—Even if civilian supplies are cut to "dangerously low" levels, there is not enough manpower to meet military requirements for heavy underwear. It may be necessary, WPB said, to "give consideration to restricting civilian sales to outdoor workers—in logging, farming and similar occupations."

Commoner, Kin Of George IV, Is Dead

RUISLIP, England, May 30.—(AP)—Death of William Matthew O'Leary, 49, who claimed to be a great-great-grandson of King George V and Mrs. Maria Anne Fitzherbert, was announced today.

The British Press Association said that the King, when Prince of Wales, went through marriage ceremony with Mrs. Fitzherbert in 1785 but that royal approval was not given to the marriage and the King later married Princess Caroline.

O'Leary was claimant to the Fitzherbert estate, valued at more than $1,000,000.

Don Whitehead Wins Honorary Doctorate

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 30.—(AP) Don Whitehead, Associated Press war correspondent who covered almost every phase of the European war from the rout of Rommel in North Africa to the unconditional surrender of Germany, today was recommended for an honorary degree of doctor of laws by the University of Kentucky faculty.

The degree will be conferred at a later commencement convocation when Whitehead, an alumnus of the university, returns to the United States.

Three of her honorary degrees approved by the faculty will be conferred at 78th annual commencement exercises Friday night. Recipients are Mrs. James Ben Ali Haggin, New York and Versailles, Ky., donor of a trust fund in honor of her late husband; William Henry McAdams, Lexington and Newton, Mass., professor of chemical engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Eli Lilly, widely known chemist of Indianapolis, Ind.

Comedy Banter

Jack Armstrong and Al Eldridge, two boys with an inexhaustible supply of comedy banter and original tunes, are headlining the floor show at Jack Sheriff's Theater Restaurant this week, and they're doing one grand job of it.

Jack, the taller of the two, a good-looking Englishman with a decided accent, does most of the singing and Al, a Mr. Five by Five, fingers the keys of the piano, providing a thumping rhythm for their lyrics. . . . The boys have been together 12 years — they've been a team that long and the blending of their voices shows they have worked hard.

Jack Armstrong

All of their songs have been arranged especially for them. Each is a take-off, usually a burlesque, on some popular tune or a classic, with words to match. . . . Jack's voice is as Irish as a French fried potato and consequently their songs are slanted with an Irish twist, which makes for good listening.

Featured on the same program with Armstrong and Eldridge this week are Betty Blue, who does a sort of Kate Smith lyric, and Frances Dorn, a nimble-footed dancer, who, I think, looks like Jinx Falkenburg's twin.

Shows Going On

While the Paradise Room is being redecorated throughout in a modern motif, night club throngs are finding their entertainment in the adjoining Dogwood room, where shows at lunch and at night are going along as usual. There's a new revue opening up today, featuring Marilyn Hightower, ballet dancer; Marshall Rogers, who offers a musical novelty; Jack De Leon, and the Eight Lucky Girls, whose routines have been revamped to fit the smaller floor space.

Three Fine Films

While it is not a smart policy to have three pictures of such similar nature playing one against another during the same week, Atlanta is fortunate in having a better than average movie program beginning today, the quality of which is greatly enhanced by the openings of "Son of Lassie" and "Son of Flicka," and "Maryland," all exceptional animal stories, and all in color.

"Son of Lassie" will open with a world premiere at Loew's Grand today. . . . Donald Crisp and several of the other lesser known members of the former "Lassie" picture are again to be seen in this one.

"Thunderhead—Son of Flicka" meets the desire for a sequel to the Mary O'Hara story of horses and picturesques outdoor life, and Roddy McDowall, Preston Foster and Rita Johnson, as well as the featured performers, who scored in the original play, are seen in this picture, which opens at the Fox.

Manager Bill Murray, of the Rialto, has used a great deal of foresight and genuine showmanship in bringing back several old-time screen hits to the Rialto theater, where the audience response has borne out his good judgment. Manager Murray returns another of these fine oldtimers, "Maryland," to his screen today. Filmed in technicolor, "Maryland" is the story of horseracing, with an exciting steeplechase providing the highlight scene.

Other than the customary holdovers at the Roxy, Rhodes and Capitol theaters, the only remaining picture is "Frisco Sal," a musical which opens at the Paramount today.

Housing Chief Problem For Atlanta During 1945

By TINA RANSOM

Atlanta's problem of 1945 is not of breadlines or doles or famine. It's people walking the streets look well-fed and prosperous. There is a self-respecting air about them and the silver jingles in their pockets.

But Atlanta has a problem nevertheless, only a degree less heartrending and disrupting to the security that should belong to all families. It is a problem of housing.

Thousands of families are in need of housing in the Atlanta area, families who are giving their all to aid the war effort. Many of them have come to Atlanta to fill essential war jobs, but it is difficult for them to carry on their work when their families lack adequate housing facilities or are expecting to be dispossessed because of sale of the houses they are occupying.

FAMILIES SEPARATED

Some essential war workers who must stay on the job have been separated from their families for months because no housing is available here. Other wrokers are commuting from points as far as 100 miles—this after working from eight to 10 hours a day.

Families of civilian war workers, either in private industry or local, state and federal government employ, are eligible to occupy war housing, but due to shortage of materials, it has not been possible to provide a sufficient number of new houses to accommodate all of them.

War Housing Center offices here and in Marietta estimate that there is at present a backlog of 2,000 war worker families who are eligible for war housing, but have not been placed. In addition, there are many others registered with this and other housing departments and real estate agencies.

It was necessary for the family (father, mother and six children) of a recent applicant at the Atlanta War Housing Center to spend three nights in railroad and bus stations before that office could locate any available accommodations for them.

ESSENTIAL EMPLOYES

Both the father and mother of this family were employed in most essential war work and had been buying bonds each week; but there was no housing available for a family with six children. This family was finally placed in a three-room apartment—the first vacancy listed with the War Housing Center available to families with children. Of course, this isn't adequate space for a family of eight, but it provided a place to sleep and eat and they were grateful to the point of tears.

The War Housing Center, other local housing departments, and real estate companies are doing everything possible to assist the harassed and homeless. They need the help of every citizen in Atlanta.

If you know of a vacant house or apartment, or if you have extra space in your home that you could share, telephone the War Housing Center at Walnut 9416, and it will see that the information is made available to the people needing your help.

U. S. Pauses To Mourn War Dead As Frank Walker Eulogizes FDR

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Americans everywhere — at home, in the now quiet European war areas and in the far-away Pacific battle theaters—paused yesterday to mourn the military dead of this and past wars.

Parades, religious services and simple holiday ceremonies marked the observance of the 77th Memorial Day throughout the nation while overseas thousands of fighting men and women attended special services or visited cemeteries where their fallen buddies lie.

Many war plants, their sights fixed on victory over Japan, worked as usual as did most government offices.

Only a handful of the 240 remaining Civil War veterans were able to join in celebrating the day which was inaugurated in honor of their dead comrades.

Wreaths were placed on the tombs of the Unknown Soldier of World War I in London, Paris and in Arlington National cemetery.

At Hyde Park, N. Y., where two small children reverently laid a wreath of spring flowers on the grave of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, Postmaster General Frank C. Walker said of the former commander in chief:

"Rarely in history have whole peoples so taken from one man's fire and flame of courage. From the depths of defeat this man led the nations of the world to victory."

Massed about the grave were many floral tributes, including one from President Truman.

Buglers sounded the solemn notes of Taps over the graves of the dead throughout the European battle zones.

An Anzio beachhead, where 8,000 men were killed, Lt. Gen Lucien K. Truscott told U. S. Fifth Army men, "We pray that when the soldiers' last job is done the statesmen of the world will make sure that lasting peace" for which their soldier comrades died.

Services were held at 62 American cemeteries in France. Observances also took place in Germany, where more than 8,000 Americans lie in temporary graves.

On Guam, floral wreaths made by natives were placed on graves. Protestant, Catholic and Jewish chaplains conducted services.

In Washington, congress remained in session and most government offices were open.

Across the Potomac at Arlington cemetery, Director of War Mobilization and Reconversion Fred M. Vinson said: "The homage we pay our dead here today will be a mockery unless we use to the utmost the opportunity for which they fought and died."

Sen. Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, told a Memorial Day observance at Gettysburg National cemetery that proposals for immediate enactment of a peacetime draft law "strike at the very basis of freedom for which our boys are fighting."

GEORGIA FLAG FLIES IN PARIS ON V-E

Because of a Georgia soldier's request to Gov. Arnall and the prompt aid of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, American GIs and Allies saw the Georgia state flag carried in the triumphant parade down the Champs Elysees in Paris on V-E Day.

Sgt. Henry Taylor, of Quitman, Ga., at that time stationed with an administrative unit in France, had written the Governor asking for a flag from his home state. Unable to comply with his request, Gov. Arnall assigned the task to the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce officials, who found a flag in a novelty store and sent it to the sergeant in time for V-E Day.

Many Georgians recognized the flag as it was carried down the Champs Elysees, Sgt. Taylor recently wrote to Mrs. Marjorie O. Apps, secretary of the chamber's information department.

Cotton Leaders Seeking 'Facts'

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 30.—(UP)—Representatives of cotton industry research agencies gathered here today in the first of a two-day meeting on the postwar competitive situation of the south's number one crop.

Approximately 45 delegates, representing both governmental and private agencies, were present at the opening session. The conference was called by the National Cotton Council at the suggestion of the Pace congressional subcommittee conducting hearings on cotton problems.

"This is not a policy or program-building conference," said Oscar Johnston, of Scott, Miss., and president of the National Cotton Council. "It is to get facts."

William R. Blake, executive vice president of the cotton council, told the conference that lack of facts had blocked attempts to draw up a comprehensive cotton program in the past. He said, "we have repeatedly run up against an insistent demand for facts and we will not get far until they are supplied."

Miners Take Holiday

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., May 30. (AP)—Pennsylvania's coal production was sharply curtailed today when more than 90 per cent of the anthracite region's 68,000 miners observed the Memorial Day holiday. Production was estimated at 17,500 tons, compared to the normal daily production of approximately 206,000 tons.

Bar Association Presents Supreme Court With Plaque

The Georgia supreme court, 100 years old as an institution, has been commemorated for "a century of unfaltering devotion . . . to equal justice under law."

In a special ceremony yesterday afternoon in the court chamber at the state capitol, the Georgia Bar Association presented a bronze plaque to the tribunal.

Hundreds of lawyers from over the state gathered for the occasion.

Facing the black-robed justices of the present court, Charles J. Bloch, of Macon, who today retires as president of the Georgia Bar Association, said:

"Never before has there been a court held in higher esteem than that of today."

Marion Smith, of Atlanta, chairman of the centennial committee of the bar association, presented the memorial plaque. In his address, he traced the history of the court and declared:

"The court, throughout its history, has been free from political control. . . . The record of the court bespeaks its history."

The plaque was unveiled by little Miss Sarah Rawson Allen, great-great-great-granddaughter of Joseph Henry Lumpkin, first chief justice of the tribunal.

Gov. Arnall, in accepting the memorial in behalf of the state, said that "we are proud of what this court has meant to our state, the bar and our people."

All the speakers lamented the death of the late Justice Warren Grice, of Macon, who died last Sunday.

Chief Justice R. C. Bell made the response on behalf of the court after Gov. Arnall had accepted the plaque in behalf of the state.

The plaque, which lists the names of all chief justices and associate justices who have served on the court in its 100-year history, says:

"Gratefully presented to the supreme court of Georgia by the Georgia Bar Association in commemoration of 100 years of notable service to the people of this state.

"A century of unfaltering devotion to the great principle of equal justice under law."

FATHER'S DAY, JUNE 17

ALL IN THE GAME
JACK TROY

An Old Policy It is consisent with front-office policy at Ponce de Leon Park to give the fans their money's worth.

Sometimes the events aren't advertised in advance, such as the 16-inning game on ladies' night, and that makes it all the more appealing.

There was no indication, as the Cracker-Baron game reached the halfway mark, that it would continue beyond nine innings. The Barons came up with a rousing four-run spurt to go ahead by three runs.

It appeared that Ray Stokes had gummed up the works when he let John Hetki's single get through him. It accounted for two runs and then the Barons scored two more.

But when the Crackers came to bat and loaded the bases, Stokes was ready to make amends. He blasted a triple and the ball game was tied 8-all in the eighth.

From the eighth until the 16th neither team scored. Shelby Kinney, third Cracker pitcher, held the Barons hitless from the 10th until the 16th.

It's funny how things will happen. Billy Jones had gone hitless all the way until the last inning and then sparked a rally with a single. Wally Gaddis, who had relieved Hetki in the eighth, saw a chance to win his own game when it came his turn to bat after Jones had reached third. Gaddis brought in Jones with an infield hit.

But the Crackers hadn't had their bat in the 16th and still more unusual things were due to happen. Mel Ivy, coming up with one out, got his first hit of the game, a long triple. And that set off the winning drive. Helwig walked and Pinkston hit the signboards for two bases and the winning effort.

Four hours and 10 minutes was the official record of the battle of the Barons and the Crackers.

Kinney hung in there and battled to win his fifth game of the season.

Walks Five Times The record book doesn't show the most bases on balls for a batsman in a single game, but Fred Helwig must either have broken or tied the mark when he walked five times Tuesday night. He scored the winning run after his fifth free trip to first.

The least surprised citizen in the park, as the game wore on past midnight, was Umpire Steamboat Johnson. It is his privilege to be around when all long games in the Southern League are played.

Steamboat was the umpire in charge in two of the most memorable games in the history of the league. One was the longest day game, a 23-inning affair between Atlanta and Chattanooga, that ended in a 2-2 tie; also the longest night game, 20 years later, Little Rock winning over Chattanooga, 7 to 4, after 20 innings.

There was another game, too, involving the Steamer. It was the longest nine-inning game on record. It happened at New Orleans in 1927.

An argument began over the throwing of a "bean ball" at Shortstop Gardner, of New Orleans. A free-for-all fight started. A New Orleans police captain, Joe Sonnenberg, went on the field to stop the fight. Max Rosenfeld, of the Birmingham team, thinking Sonnenberg was merely a spectator getting into a good fight, cracked the police captain on the chin. Rosenfeld was hustled off to jail and it took nearly two hours to get him back. Johnson refused to call the game, since Rosenfeld had made an honest mistake.

Finally, play was resumed and New Orleans won, 25 to 16.

Incidentally, there is one other Steamboat Johnson story that bears repeating. It goes to show how a person can become an innocent victim.

Johnson carries an old pint beverage bottle full of Birmingham dirt to use in removing the shine from new baseballs. The dirt contains much iron dust.

The door to the umpires' dressing room was opened when a young man came up and looked in. He saw Steamboat holding the bottle, preparing to spill some dirt on the table. But he didn't notice the dirt.

"Oh, excuse me," he said. "I'll shut the door." Steamboat grabbed the young man and explained the circumstances.

Fact of the matter, Johnson has never touched hard stuff in his entire life.

Rae Schuessler on Job A former ace sports publicist at the University of Alabama, Rae Schuessler, who has a brother, Howard, in the theatrical business in Rome, Ga., is very active in the Pacific war.

Rae's a blister gunner on a B-29 and has been taking part in raids on Nagoya and other Japanese bases. He reported much fire when his plane finished each run.

In peacetime Rae widely publicized the football teams turned out by Frank Thomas. He always did a fine job.

When the business with Japan is done, Rae hopes to return to his old post and accompany Alabama to some more bowl games.

For good reason, football seems a bit tame to him right now.

Don Floyd Faces Manley In City Net Meet Feature

The quarter-final bracket in the men's singles division of the annual City tennis tournament was completed yesterday afternoon when Hank Crawford, Bill Lurie, Frank Willett and Vince Connerat moved forward with straight set victories over their unranked foes. Don Floyd, Malcolm Manley, Howard McCall and Jack Teagle, the other seeded entries gained the round of eight Tuesday.

Frank Willett, Tech's No. 1 player and ranked next to Defending Champion Jack Teagle in the draw, downed Niles Millsap, a Tech teammate, 6-2, 6-3, in one of the best matches on yesterday's program. The stocky Jacket ace will be back on the firing line again this afternoon when he clashes with eighth-seeded Vince Connerat at 4 o'clock. A win in this match will place Willett in the semi-finals.

Don Floyd and Malcolm Manley, a pair of Atlanta Tennis Club rivals, will battle at 6 o'clock in what promises to be the top match on today's 13-match card. Semi-final matches in all divisions will be played Saturday, while the finals are scheduled for Sunday afternoon.

Two Derby Favorites Take Wood

Jeep, Hoop Jr. Winners in Noted Jamaica Memorial

By ORLO ROBERTSON.

NEW YORK, May 30.—(AP)—Two strong eastern candidates for the June 9 running of the Kentucky Derby came out of the Wood Memorial at Jamaica today when Jeep and Hoop Jr. won the two sections of the $25,000-added stake. A record crowd of 64,537 sent betting marks soaring to new highs.

Jeep, carrying the famous Eton blue and brown capped silks of Col. C. V. Whitney, won the first division of the mile-and-one-sixteenth stake by three lengths, and Hoop Jr., owned by F. W. Hooper, Florida contractor, duplicated the feat in the second section.

Jeep, ridden by Andy Kirkland, came up just before the field of nine hit the stretch to win the first section with a filly, Gallorette, which is not entered in the Derby, holding on for second place, two lengths back. Dockstader, one of the Greentree stable's Derby hopefuls, came up fast to finish third.

Hoop Jr., handled by Eddie Arcaro, led from the start in the second section and drew away from the field five furlongs from home and won going away with Alexis, a 3-to-2 favorite, second, and Sir Francis, which is not entered in the Derby, third.

The turnout, which surpassed all previous attendance marks in New York, hung up a new world wagering mark for seven races by pouring $3,564,151 through the machines, topped the old daily double mark by betting $202,216 and surpassed the state's one-race wagering with a $596,679 figure on the second division of the Wood.

Approximately $130,000 was turned over to various war relief funds as the track's share of the day's net profits.

The Times favored Hooper's three-year-old son of Sir Gallahad 3d, as Eddie Arcaro sent Hoop Jr. over the route in 1:45. Jeep, sired by the English Derby winner, Mahmoud, was clocked in 1:45.4.

Their manner of winning was entirely different. Jeep, far back in the early running as William Helis' Greek Warrior stepped the first six furlongs in 1:12, with Lt. Edward Lasker's Flood Town at his throat, went to the front just outside the eighth pole and pulled away with long ground-eating strides.

Hoop Jr. battled for the lead from the start with Whitney's Red Pixie and Mrs. P. A. B. Widener's Polynesian. The latter two called quits after six furlongs and Hoop Jr. pulled away, with the fast-closing Alexis from Henry Lunger's Christiana stable offering the only argument in the stretch.

Smith goes to Druid Hills highly recommended by Kirkwood, the trick shot wizard.

Crackers in Tie For Second Spot

By JACK TROY
Constitution Sports Editor.

With Lew Carpenter pitching seven-hit baseball and fanning 11 batters, the Crackers downed the Birmingham Barons, 7 to 2, for their fourth win of the series and vaulted into a tie for second place with Chattanooga last night.

Carpenter was in excellent form. Both runs were unearned.

The Crackers really won the game in the first inning when Roy Pinkston, saying farewell as an Atlanta outfielder, blasted a four-run home run to center. Carpenter's knuckle ball danced past the Baron batters as he turned in his third victory against one defeat.

The Crackers lost only the first game of the five-game series. That game went 10 innings and was capped by John Cappa's game-winning homer in the left field stands.

Mel Heiman started for the Barons and was lifted for a pinch hitter in the seventh. Walt Milner finished.

The Cuyler men had a total of 13 hits, with Bob Reid's four for five setting the pace. The big blow of the night, of course, was Pinkston's farewell salute to Atlanta fans.

The Crackers are off today. They resume play against Mobile on Friday night.

An excellent midweek crowd of 2,236 watched the Crackers finish off the Barons and move into a tie for second position.

Pinkston, playing his last game for the Crackers, walloped a home run with the bases loaded in the first inning. Heiman walked Helwig and Gearhart, and Cieslak hit a short single to center. Pinkston's drive to center took a high bound over Michie's head and everybody scored.

There was a curious play in the second. Martin's fly back of third fell for two bases. Gunnells picked it up and threw the ball into right field. Martin scored.

The Crackers waited until two were out to score in the third. Reid, Gunnells and Fulenwider connected for successive singles.

In the fifth, the Crackers scored again after loading the bases on two hits and a walk. Reid was forced at the plate on Helwig's fielder's choice. Wentworth threw to first trying for a double play, and Gunnells scored, beating the return throw with room to spare.

The third strike got away from Ivy and Curtis reached first on a strike-out in the seventh. Curtis advanced on a single and scored on Pinch Hitter Gudelj's double.

In the eighth the Crackers scored their seventh and final run. Pinkston forced Cieslak, who walked. Pinkston went to second on Ivy's infield hit and scored on Reid's single to center.

Becker Cops Net Title At Naval Air Station

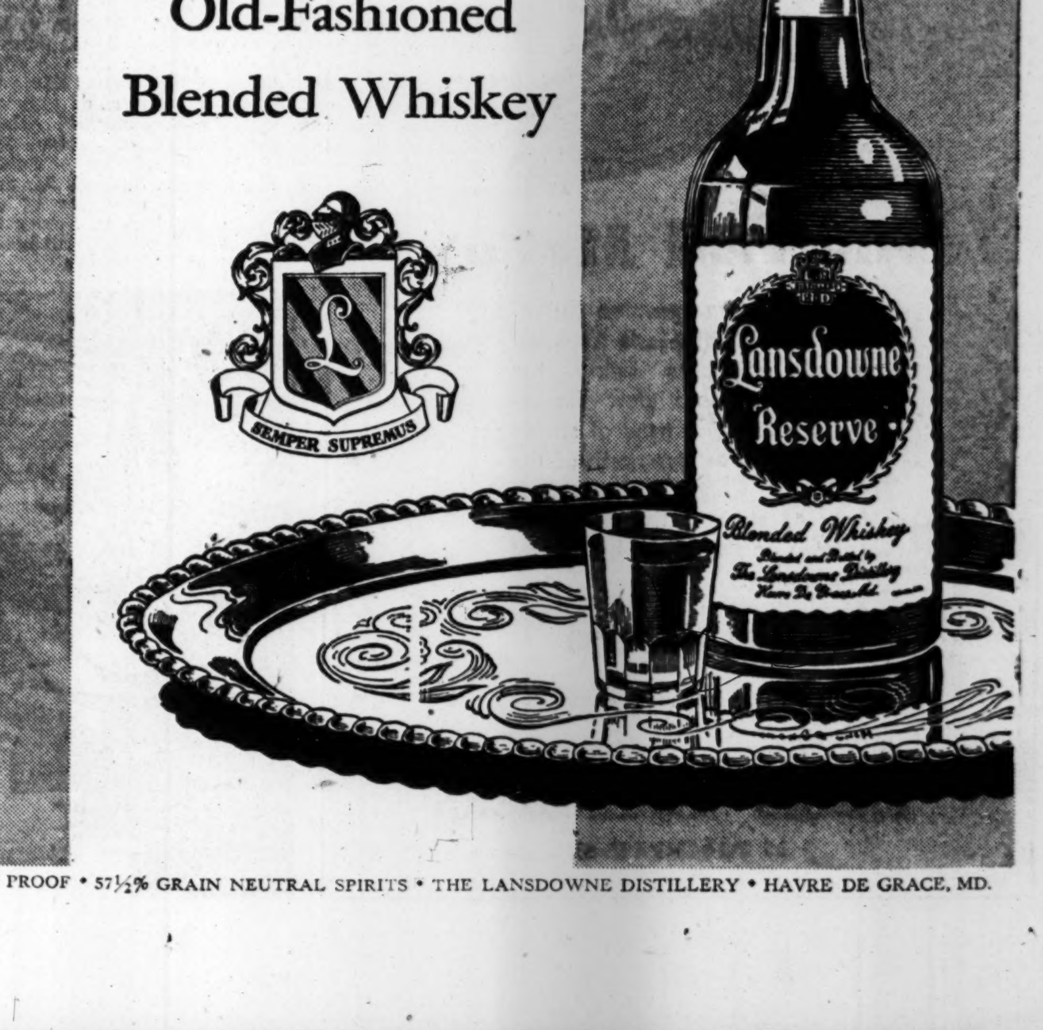

Playing in fine weather before a large crowd of officers and enlisted personnel, W. R. Becker, aviation machinist mate, second class, of West Newton, Mass., won the U. S. Naval Air Station tennis singles championship this week at the Naval Air Station here by defeating Lt. J. D. Scott, of Milburn, N. J., in the final match.

The match was hard-fought throughout, and the outcome was undetermined until Becker made a beautiful point match shot. Becker won the first set 8-6. Scott retaliated and won the second set 6-4, and after a gruelling third set Becker rallied and won 6-4.

Becker led the first set, 5-3, and had point set up eight times before he managed to win. Scott was complete master of the second set. The third set was nip-and-tuck. The match climaxed a very successful tennis tournament.

The graduating class held its class day on the school campus Saturday afternoon. The program consisted of the introduction of the seniors by Miss Josephine Kane, the reading of the class poem by Miss Ann Newman, the class will by Miss Frances Joiner, the class prophecy by Miss Patti Conlan, and the memories by Miss Marie Claire Gunning. A member of the armed forces three years before the beginning of this war, Pfc. Myers re-entered the service in August, 1942. He had been overseas for the past two years.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by three sisters, Mrs. I. M. Shelnett, of Charleston, S. C.; Mrs. W. F. Boy, 15, Drowns At Lakewood

The body of J. B. Martin, of a Meador avenue address, who drowned in the lake at Lakewood yesterday, was recovered late last night by city and county police and firemen, who dragged the lake.

Young Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Martin, with G. P. McArthur, 13, and Douglas McArthur, 12, of 1916 Meador avenue, were swimming in the lake in front of the grandstand when Martin disappeared beneath the surface.

When he failed to rise, his companions notified Patrolmen J. H. Smith and N. H. Timmons, who called for aid in dragging the lake.

Park officials said swimming is not permitted in the lake, and the boys had apparently slipped into the lake.

2 Atlantans Named OPA Labor Advisors

Appointment of W. C. Campbell and Edward T. O'Connell, of Atlanta, and James P. Etheridge Jr., of Tampa, as regional labor advisors for the Office of Price Administration has been announced by Alexander Harris, regional administrator.

The three men, who were recommended by all the major labor organizations, will work with labor groups and OPA officials in the eight southeastern states as liaison officers between OPA and the south's 10,000,000 workers.

The labor advisers urged all labor groups to set up "cost of living" committees in co-operation with OPA programs, for the protection of workers and their families.

TRAVEL OVERTAXED

Don't Meet Returning GIs--Please!

Wives and relatives of soldiers returning from overseas have been warned by Fourth Service Command officials that they cannot see their GIs at ports or Army reception stations, and that efforts to contact the soldiers will only delay their arrival home.

Soldiers will be given plenty of time to visit their families, according to Col. H. G. Williams, transportation officer, but they will not be permitted to leave their units until they have passed through reception stations.

When GIs arrive at Atlantic ports, they go to staging areas with their units and within 48 hours are ready to leave for reception stations and home by special Pullman trains, Col. Williams explained. The speedy processing of returning troops leaves no time for visits with relatives, he pointed out.

Unnecessary travel by soldiers' families will further clutter up the overtaxed rail lines, Col. Williams said, and in addition, they will not be able to find hotel accommodations.

Discussions Set On Postwar Jobs And Markets

Plans for the expansion of markets and increasing the number of jobs available to veterans will be discussed by industrial leaders and representatives of the American Legion, organized labor and the War Manpower Commission June 8 and 9 at a conference at the Henry Grady hotel.

Plans for the meeting, which will bring delegates from Georgia, Florida, Alabama, South Carolina and Tennessee, are being completed by J. Pat Kelly, national veterans' employment representative here. The conference will be held under the auspices of the National Employment Committee of the American Legion.

"Legionnaires and representatives of government agencies, labor and other groups must assist industry in formulating its production plans," Kelly asserted, "if we are to have jobs for the millions of war veterans and others in the near future. Legionnaires in Georgia and all other states are offering themselves to industry in an effort to assist employers in formulating their production and sales plans."

Blaze Levels Business Area In Pennsylvania

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., May 30. (UP)—Fire razed the heart of the business section of this mining town today, causing an estimated $1,500,000 damage and leaving 40 families homeless.

The flames, fanned by winds which at times reached 50 miles an hour, destroyed 43 buildings and damaged 12 others.

Five volunteer fire companies from Mahanoy City and seven from nearby cities were called in to fight the fire which threatened to wipe out the community of 13,500 population. Civilian defense crews joined 200 firemen in the three-hour battle to control the blaze.

The fire broke out in a paint shop and quickly ate its way through the four-story Guinan Department Store, six apartment buildings and several business establishments in a two-block sweep.

Twenty-five firemen, including Fire Chiefs Wassil Govera, of Mahanoy City, and Adam Blakiewich, of Shenandoah, were injured.

Equal School Pay Is Asked

Reclassification positions and equalization of salaries for approximately 350 school department employes to conform with those of other departments of the city government are recommended by Stafford W. Graydon, city personnel director.

In letters to Miss Ira Jarrell, city school superintendent, and the Atlanta board of education yesterday Graydon urged a new study of board employes, exclusive of the instructional staff, in order to standardize salary payments and job classifications. He said such a procedure would simplify recruitment of employes for all city jobs and would aid in filling vacancies in school employments.

Pointing out that nonschool civil service employes reach their maximum salary payments in five years, while a majority of board employes require nine years to obtain maximum, Graydon said his proposal would be more attractive to prospective school department workers and would reduce recruitment difficulties.

Step-by-step comparisons of school classifications and salaries with nonschool divisions of the government are contained in the six-page proposal which he dispatched to Miss Jarrell and board members.

Although the study by Graydon fails to indicate whether the revision in line with his proposal would increase or decrease school department pay roll payments, he said the revisions for the most part would be slight, and that the amount involved would be negligible.

Many of the school employes would get some increase in salaries, and some few would get minor reductions under the Graydon proposal, but if his proposal is adopted, salaries and classifications will be standardized for all the 3,000 municipal workers whose jobs are now under the merit system office.

The ballroom will be transformed into a deck scene, and the sorority colors, red and white, will feature the decorations. Never daunted, the Sunevs have rigged up a gangplank at the entrance, and everyone will have to walk the well-known "straight and narrow" to gain admittance to the dance. The girls and boys will attend in appropriate cruise attire.

The officers of the sorority and their escorts include: President, June Kimsey, with Sonny Dryman; vice president, Mary Lowe, with Porter Payne; secretary, Pat Coleman, with Sherman Danzler; treasurer, Nina Courtney, with Tommy Lukens; sergeant-at-arms, Shirley Baggett, with John Phelps; chaplain, Mary Lyn Bridges, with Dom Watt.

The chaperons will include Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Tate, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Bridges, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Courtenay, Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Tarrant.

Saturday the sorority members and their dates will gather at Peachtree circle at the fountain to go to North Fulton Park for a glorious day of sun, swimming, horseback riding, and picnic luncheon. On Sunday, Shirley Baggett will entertain at a tea at her home on Rosedale road at 2 o'clock in honor of the freshmen members of the sorority. The freshmen officers are: Betty Jo Pierce, president; Barbara Dickey, vice president; Barbara O'Dell, secretary, and Jane Schneider, treasurer.

BACHELOR BROTHERS ENTERTAIN

When those popular bachelor brothers, Mickey Cebollero and Albert Ledesma, who are Miami's gift to Atlanta, gave their first party in their new home on Tuesday evening, they not only planned every detail to perfection, from the unusual menu to the "napa" prize, but they even did some of the cooking themselves.

Just to make their party different, the menu was, for the most part, Spanish. Albert, it seems, is really a "whiz" when it comes to preparing "pollo guizado" (Spanish chicken to you), so that intriguing dish, served on a bed of steamed yellow rice, was the piece de resistance for supper, served buffet style. Then there was something called "garbanzos con chorizos," which, Mikey explained, was chick peas with Spanish sausages for seasoning. There was also a chef's salad, for which Albert makes a special dressing that is just "out of this world," according to the guests. What wouldn't some of them give for his recipe!

The most fun came, however, with the distributing of the prizes (to the ladies only), which were awarded by the simple expedient of matching a name with a number, with Margaret (Mrs. Wilkinson) Wagar doing the honors. Peggy Johnson was the lucky winner of the first prize, a huge bottle of Lily Dache toilet water, and Vincentia (Mrs. Jesse) Shelton came second, winning a bottle of Coty perfume. Zaida Clay and her mother, Mrs Ryburn Clay, were third and fourth winners, with Mrs. Henry Tompkins coming fifth, and Mrs. Wagar herself winning "napa," which is a custom of Spanish origin and means, most appropriately in this case, a little something extra for someone who has been useful.

Most of the 30 guests were members of the married contingent, but the younger set was well represented by Isabelle Woolford, Zaida Clay, Peggy Johnson and Harriet MacKenna.

TO ATTEND BRADFORD GRADUATION

LOUELLA PARSONS REPORTS

Powell Portrays Valet In Comedy for M-G-M

HOLLYWOOD, May 30.—(INS) A happy, healthy man today is Louis B. Mayer, who has had a terrific run of bad luck, first with his broken pelvis and then with a fractured leg. Now L. B. has been pronounced physically fit by his New York doctor. Both casts have been removed and he is back at M-G-M on his regular schedule—working-man's hours, I might add.

When I talked with him he told me the first thing he did was to sign William Powell on a new seven-year contract. After Bill finishes "Hoodlum Saint," he will be starred in "Gentleman's Gentleman," a hilarious comedy in which Powell plays the valet. Bill is one of the few actors who can play either comedy or drama with equal facility.

There's been a little horse-swapping going on between RKO and Republic—if you can call a $50,000 deal by such a corny term. RKO had Borden Chase's story, "That Man Maline," all set to go, with John Wayne in the star spot, when Republic put in a bid to buy the property for the very fancy figure quoted above. An old angle is that John Wayne is still in the top role—and just moves his make-up kit from RKO over to the valley.

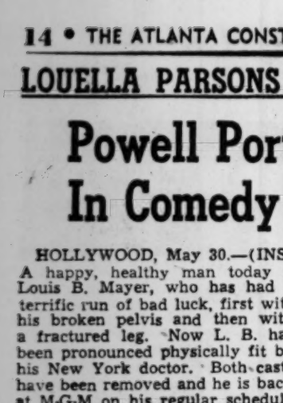

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: Van Johnson and Keenan Wynn visit a photograph shop in West Los Angeles, where a very pretty girl sells the records. She has never given Van the time of day, and apparently her indifference intrigued him, after the rush all the bobby sockers hand him. So he asked to take her out to dinner and she accepted. Here's the interesting part. Her name is Connie Donahue, and she is the daughter of the late Jack Donahue, famed Ziegfeld dancer, and Marilyn Miller's partner. His widow and three daughters live here. I am not saying it's a romance with Van and Connie—just a friendship.

Here's news about Tyrone Power from two different sources. Barron Polan sends me an air-mail copy of the "Leatherneck," showing a picture of Lt. Tyrone Power with a group of other Marines. In the copy of the magazine it tells about a show Tyrone puts on each Sunday with Cpl. Dickie Moore, another movie personality. The other news about Tyrone came from his agent, Ralph Blum, who encloses a copy of a letter from Ty which says: "Had a pleasant experience the other day. Gertrude Lawrence is here entertaining the boys and we did a sketch on the radio together. I have admired her for so many years and it's strange that we should meet and work together out here. Moss Hart will be out next week with 'The Man Who Came To Dinner.'"

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD COLLECTED AT RANDOM: Lou Costello will get out his company clothes to act as best man when his brother, Pat, marries Mary Kurtz on June 6; Xavier Cugat writes his friends that he and his girl friend of long standing, Ann Harsh, are visiting a preacher on July 4; Faye Emerson and Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt have reserved a table for 12 for the Ann Lehr Hollywood Guild canteen benefit, June 7. The place is Bob Dalton's new restaurant; Joan Carroll leaves this weekend to visit her brother, James, who is studying to become a Jesuit priest at Los Gatos; Marguerite Chapman and John Carroll have discovered each other after all this time; Charles Laughton has been painted in oils by Fletcher Martin, in his Capt. Kidd character. That's all today.

Senators Ready Farmers' Rebate On Tractor Gas

A bill to refund farmers' part of the tax they pay on tractor gasoline will be ready for debate in the Georgia house today.

Representatives Smith of Emanuel, Ray of Warren, Hand and Twitty of Mitchell and Roughton of Washington, authors of the measure, predict its overwhelming passage. Under the bill, farmers would be refunded four cents of each six cents they pay as tax on gasoline used in tractors.

The gasoline sold for tractors would be colored, so state inspectors could spot it if it were used in automobiles. Farmers would have to show sales slips to prove they owned the number of tractors for which they were purchasing gasoline. They would have to purchase the gasoline in 25-gallon lots and certify that they would use it exclusively in tractors for farming. They would have to file claims for the tax refunds with the state revenue commissioner every 120 days. Persons violating the terms of this act would be guilty of a felony.

Precincts Are Chosen For Fall Primaries

Designation of remaining precincts for the September 5 municipal primary is billed as the principal order of business for members of the city executive committee which will meet at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow at the city hall, Watson Cary, committee secretary, has announced.

Practically all precincts will be located in various schools, but in some instances the schools are not located conveniently and other places must be selected. The committee is to meet to pass on possibly half a dozen such locations.

Within the next few days, committeemen are slated to submit to Cary lists of voting managers and clerks, and committee members are laying plans for the balloting in which it is expected more than 25,000 votes will be cast.

500-Gallon Still Destroyed In East Point Section

A 500 gallon liquor still was destroyed yesterday afternoon near East Point by two Fulton county policemen.

Officers J. D. Johnson and L. P. McKee reported they found the still on Redwine road approximately three miles from the city limits of East Point. The still had been in use and contained a quantity of mash waiting to be run, the officers said.

Located near a small branch, the still was near a site where Johnson discovered two stills and destroyed 1,000 gallons of mash earlier in the year. No arrests were made.

173 Cars for 7 States

Another 173 new 1942 automobiles will be made available to eligible southeastern buyers in June, from the nation's dwindling supply which is now less than 4,000 cars, OPA regional office in Atlanta, has announced. The states over which this allotment must be distributed are Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Tennessee, Virginia and the two Carolinas.

Prompt action is necessary in replying to the attractive offers in the Want Ad pages of The Constitution.

SUNDAY NAMED 'SHUT-INS' ' DAY

Mayor Hartsfield has proclaimed Sunday at "Shut-Ins' Day" in Atlanta and has called on all citizens to remember their shut-in friends.

In issuing the proclamation yesterday Hartsfield pointed out that many servicemen have been added to the normal number resident in Atlanta this year and urged that every consideration and encouragement be extended to them for the sacrifice they have made in behalf of the nation and world freedom.

A copy of the mayor's proclamation was dispatched to Clarence E. Power, of Marietta, who has been founder and promoter of Shut-Ins' Day since 1937 and who bills himself as "The Sunshine Man."

The day is observed nationally, with friends of stricken Americans and organizations joining to bring cheer to those who, because of physical handicaps, are confined to their homes or beds.

Milledgeville Plant's Union Election June 13

Following a National Labor Relations Board ruling from Washington that the Reynolds Corporation, of Milledgeville, is guilty of unfair labor practices, the local NLRB yesterday set June 13 as the tentative date when employes will vote on unionization by the CIO.

The national board found that employers at the Reynolds plant had promoted a company union, the Workers' Welfare Association, Inc., and had opposed efforts of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO) to organize the plant.

The board also found that a number of employes were discharged for labor union activity, and ordered them rehired and reimbursed for wages lost during the period of unemployment. The firm was also ordered to cease supporting the Workers' Welfare Association on the grounds that the company-supported union is not a "genuine and independent" collective bargaining agency.

The WORRY CLINIC

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

(Mabel is heartbroken and begging for help. Do you think the feminists quoted below are going to do her much good by their ardent support of the female sex and their vigorous indictment of the erring husband? But notice my advice. It contains not one word in defense of the straying male, yet many women use it as the basis of their charge that I pick on women and defend my own sex!)

CASE F-282: Mabel G., aged 36, has three children.

"Oh, Dr. Crane, I am almost crazy with worry and heartache," she exclaimed, almost before she had sat down in my office.

"We were so wonderfully happy, I never dreamed anything would ever spoil our beautiful home life.

"But now I find that my husband has been running around with a married woman only 23 years of age. Her husband is in the Army. She works in the same department with my husband.

"He has been driving her to and from work. But I never dreamed he was falling in love with her. He has been going out at night to his lodge or his union meetings, so he has said, and I always believed him.

"Oh, Dr. Crane, I love him and want him back again. What can I do?"

TURNING THE TABLES

Suppose I let you women solve this problem, for it belongs to your sex, anyway. You think I am always picking on the wives and defending my own sex (though failure to indict a man is not defense of him).

We'll turn the tables and let you suffragettes unite in saying:

"You poor dear! Your husband isn't worth even one of your pretty tears. Men are mean, selfish brutes!

"They impose on us women and steal the bloom of youth from our cheeks; then turn their backs on us and start chasing after frivolous sirens half their age.

"Your husband squanders money on this other woman which rightfully belongs to you and your three children. Why, he is worse than a brute. He ought to be horsewhipped. Society should punish him. He isn't worthy of you and the children. Forget him!"

EMOTIONALISM OF WOMEN

Now may I enter the scene with a curt, "So what!" Mabel has asked you how to get her husband back again.

What have you said that bears on the question at issue? You should look at each other self-consciously and blush in guilt, for you haven't given her a single word of constructive advice by which she can salvage her home, win her husband back again, and give her children their Daddy once more.

So I'll give her some advice that works and answers her pleading query.

"Mabel, men are very sexy creatures. And after they have been married a few years, their wives usually don't excite them as ardently as before. This is even more likely to be true after childbirth.

"But the husband misinterprets his waning ardor and thinks he may soon grow impotent, for this is the age-old bugaboo of the male sex.

"In his resulting panic, he may flee into alcoholism, or become snarlish and tell you he never did love you, or demand twin beds. Or chase around after a younger woman whose strangeness and novelty revive some of his dormant emotions.

"But the odds usually favor wives if you will banish his gnawing fear of impotence by taking the initiative. Use perfume, diaphanous nighties, and any seductive allure that will excite him.

"Be active together in a live-wire church and go out on a date at least once per week. But never even dignify the opposition to the extent of mentioning her."

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Constitution, inclosing a long 3c stamped, addressed envelope and a dime to cover typing or printing costs, when you send for one of his psychological charts.)

FOOD IDEAS

By SALLY SAVER.

SALMON SOUFFLE

Drain a pound can of salmon, saving the juice. Remove the bones and flake the fish. Melt 3 tablespoons fat (butter or margarine) add 4 tablespoons flour and when smooth, stir in 1 cup milk and the juice from the salmon. Stir constantly thick and boiling. Remove from the fire, add salmon, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, salt and pepper to season, ½ teaspoon grated onion, one tablespoon lemon juice and the well beaten yolks of 3 eggs. Beat the egg whites until stiff enough to hold their shape. Fold these into the souffle, pour into a buttered, deep baking dish and bake in a moderate oven—375 degrees—for 50 minutes. Serve at once.

DEEP DISH BLACKBERRC PIE

Pick over, wash and drain 1 quart ripe blackberries. Mix 1 cup sugar with 2 tablespoons flour and then stir into the berries, mixing them well. (May use ½ cup sugar and ½ cup syrup). Put the berries in a deep baking dish. Mix 1½ cups flour with ½ teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon baking powder. Add ½ cup shortening, rubbing it into the flour with a fork, pastry chopper or fingers. When well blended add just enough ice water to make a stiff dough—about 1-3 cup. Turn the dough out on a lightly floured board and roll to a scant eighth inch thickness to fit the top of the baking dish. Place over the top of the dish and pinch the edge of the pastry firmly to the edge of the dish. Cut several slits in the top and bake in a moderate oven—375 degrees—for about 45 minutes. Serve warm or cold, plain, with cream, or hard sauce.

CREAM OF GREEN ONION SOUP

2 tablespoons butter or other fat
2 cups thinly sliced onions
¾ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups boiling water
1 2-3 cups evaporated milk (1 tall can)
Grated cheese, if desired

Melt butter in soup kettle. Add onions and salt. Cover closely and cook slowly until onions are tender, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat. Sprinkle with the flour and stir to blend smoothly. Add water and boil until slightly thickened, stirring constantly. When ready to serve, add milk and reheat. Sprinkle each serving with grated cheese, if desired. Yield: 4 servings.

HUCKLEBERRY ROLY-POLY

Mix and sift 2 cups sifted flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 4 teaspoons baking powder and 2 tablespoons sugar. Rub in 1-4 cup shortening, and then add 1 well-beaten egg mixed with 1-3 cup milk. Mix to a soft dough, adding a little more milk if necessary. Turn the dough out on a lightly floured board and roll to a rectangular sheet about one-eighth of an inch thick. Spread with 2 cups washed and drained huckleberries and sprinkle with 1-2 cup sugar. Roll up and pinch the ends well together. Place on a greased baking pan and bake in a moderate oven—375 degrees—for 45 minutes. Serve warm with cream, foamy sauce or hard sauce.

HUCKLEBERRY CAKE

Wash and drain 1 1-2 cups large, ripe huckleberries. Cream together 1-3 cup shortening and 1-2 cup sugar or syrup. When well blended add 1 egg and beat to a smooth cream. Next stir in 1-2 cup milk and then add 1 1-2 cups flour sifted with 2 1-2 teaspoons baking powder and a few grains of salt. Add the berries and pour the mixture into a greased rather shallow cake pan. Bake in a hot over—400 degrees F.— for 25 minutes. Cool slightly and serve warm with lemon sauce. Serves six.

LEMON SAUCE

Mix 1 cup corn syrup with 1 1-2 teaspoons cornstarch and then add 1-2 cup boiling water. Stir until boiling, boil for 2 or 3 minutes, remove from the fire and add 1 tablespoon butter, the grated rind of 1 small lemon and 1-4 cup lemon juice. Cool slightly before serving.

STRAWBERRY ROLL

Beat the yolks of three eggs with three tablespoons of sugar until light, then stir in three tablespoons of flour which has been sifted with one teaspoon of baking powder. When well blended, fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the three eggs and pour into a greased shallow cake pan. Bake at 400 degrees for eight minutes. Turn out on a clean towel and let cool. Beat one-half pint cream until stiff, add one-third to one-half cup of powdered sugar and fold in one and one-half cups strawberries, sliced. Spread over the cake and roll like a jelly roll. Chill and cut down in slices.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS

March 21-April 19 (ARIES) — Today should prove to be a very pleasant day in general, for the influences are such as to produce a bright, buoyant, active mind, and therefore successful contacts should result, especially in pleasures, religious affairs and studious pursuits.

April 20-May 20 (TAURUS) — Between 3:07 p. m. and 6:29 p. m. do not undertake matters that require quickness and use care in your contacts with others, particularly older people. Between 3:07 p. m. and 7:36 p. m. is not favorable for artistic matters, courtships, pleasures, but after 7:36 p. m. may be considered favorable for enjoying life.

May 21-June 20 (GEMINI)—Postpone beginning affairs of importance, in fact postpone anything that has the slightest element of risk in it during the entire day. There may be a tendency towards over forcefulness which may bring disagreements. Positive statements in personal life and in world affairs can bring unpleasant results.

June 21-July 22 (CANCER)—Previous to 7:34 a. m. give your attention to necessary affairs and do not expect things to work out in a hurry. Between 7:34 a. m. and 9:34 a. m. you should be able to arrange your plans to your satisfaction and your undertakings should encounter smooth progress.

July 23-Aug. 22 (LEO)—Personal affairs, especially if they involve groups of people, will have a tendency towards strain or animosity. It will be better to withdraw to the sidelines and do not take a decided attitude in what is going on around you. You will derive more benefit from secluded interests or in being quiet.

Aug 23.-Sept. 22. (VIRGO)—The morning hours and until 12:17 p. m. contain influences that make this portion of the day filled with greater harmony, pleasantness and peace. Between 12:17 p. m. and 4:56 p. m. you are apt to encounter many things to plague you, but generally this will be caused by your own impetuous attitude. It will therefore be more advantageous to try to take life calmly.

Sept. 23-Oct. 22 (LIBRA)—Petty worries and over anxiety are apt to bring annoyances this morning and until 9:26 a. m at which time it will be better to guard against a lack of caution and use care in travel. Between 9:26 a. m. and 7:52 p. m. is favorable for dealing with friends, for entertainment. After 7:52 p. m. discouraging and melancholy feelings may mar your good judgment.

Oct. 23-Nov. 21 (SCORPIO)—The predominating influences before 2:03 p. m favor dealing with the public and contacts with business people. The remainder of the day will prove better if sudden, unpremeditated departures from the conventional are omitted.

Nov. 22-Dec. 21 (SAGITTARIUS)—Social gayeties and happy contacts with others are apt to extend into the early morning hours, but beginning at 3:17 a. m. and continuing until 4:46 p. m. the day suggests that you give your attention to matters that bring calmness and repose.

Dec. 22-Jan. 19 (CAPRICORN)—The influences predominating throughout the entire day suggest caution in dealings with others, especially those who may be in position to favor you. It will be better to attend to routine matters and not attempt new things or new ideas. Be more than discreet around new friends and moderate in all that you do.

Jan. 20-Feb. 18 (AQUARIUS)—This is not considered a good day for new beginnings, for you will have a tendency to be brusque and independent, and these qualities you do not seem to be able to get over with others. Additional responsibilities are likely to meet with restrictions.

Feb. 19-March 20 (PISCES)—Today is a time for cautiousness and moderation, for the predominating influences are not pacific or harmonious. A feeling of strain and super forcefulness abounds, and therefore leads to an inclination to go to excess in talking, exercise and overeating.

In Memoriam

In memory of our dear boy, J. W. Storey Jr., who died for our country, May 31, 1944.

So sad and sudden came the call
Your death surprised us all.
A sudden change in a moment fell
Without your loved ones to say farewell.
We often sit and think of you
And how you died;
To think we did not say goodbye
Before you closed your eyes.
No one knows our longing,
And no one sees us weep;
We shed our tears from aching hearts
While others are fast asleep.

AVIATION GALAXY

Bell Aircraft's Testers Fete 50 Ace B-29 Pilots

By RUFUS DANIEL

A half hundred of the greatest pilots in the Army Air Corps, men who have flown the gigantic B-29 into combat areas and returned with medals, oak leaf clusters and every mentioned military award, have completed a three-day meeting with Bell Bomber plant test pilots in the Second Air Force B-29 Training Conference, of Bell Aircraft Corporation.

Never before in the history of Army aviation have so many of the "know how type from experience" been gathered into one group.

The purpose of this conference was to bring together airmen who had observed the Superforts in action under the strain of battle and had made observations that could be passed along to Bell engineers and test pilots so improvements may be made, and mistakes in the first phase of this global conflict be ironed out.

Present at the training program were such aviators as Lt. Col. Edwin Loberg, of Randolph Field, Texas, who served first in the European theater as pilot of a B-17, and later flew a B-29 on bombing missions in the Pacific; also Lt. Col. M. G. Zumbalt, of Pyote Field, Texas, a native of Texas, who was present when the Japs attacked Pearl Harbor. Lt. Col. Zumbalt flew a B-29 in the Solomons air offensive.

Among air bases represented were Sioux City, Iowa, the 17th Wing; Great Bend, Neb.; Salina, Kan.; Grand Island, Howard and Walker fields, Roswell AAF, Standardization Board, Ft. Worth, Texas, and others.

Last night the visiting fliers and Bell pilots were entertained at a dinner at the Atlanta Athletic Club. Short speeches were made by Lt. Col. Bill Althenberg, AAF resident representative, and Carl Wuertele, Bell field representative.

The meeting was described by Bell officials as two days of business. All the visitors praised Atlanta and the Bell corporation and remarked that they would look forward to another trip to the next conference.

Iran Demands Troop Removal By Big Three

TEHRAN, May 30.—(AP)—With the European war ended, Iran has demanded that the United States, Britain and Russia live up to their agreement to remove all troops from the country, it was announced today.

The tripartite treaty by which Allied forces operated in Iran stipulated that they would leave within six months after hostilities ceased, and Iranian authorities viewed the period as dating from the German surrender.

Foreign Minister Sepahbodi told the Iranian parliament that identical notes had been sent to the big three Allied powers.

"We demanded that in view of cessation of European hostilities and in order to restore a normal situation in this country, British, American and Russian troops evacuate Iran," he reported.

Russian and British troops entered the rich oil country of Iran Sept. 19, 1941, after joint notes had been sent to the Iranian government protesting against the activities of Nazi agents in the country.

Reza Shah Pahlavi rejected the protests and refused to surrender or expel all Axis nationals. He abdicated Sept. 16 in favor of his son, Shaphur Mohammed Reza, and three days later British and Russian troops drove in from the north and the south.

Americans joined in sending forces to Iran in 1942, when lend-lease supplies began moving across Iran to Russia, and for the next two years a stream of tanks, trucks and aircraft poured into the Soviet Union by the Persian Gulf route.

The Big Three meeting at Tehran in 1943 pledged postwar economic aid to Iran and agreed upon the "maintenance, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Iran."

Soldier Home To Fight for Indies Wife

GREENSBORO, N. C., May 30. (UP)—Confessing that he still loved his pretty brunette West Indies wife, now being held on a charge of murdering their 14-month-old son, a returned veteran of the wars of France and Germany said today he would fight for her life until the end.

The veteran, Pfc. Arthur Hiatt, 23, returned to Greensboro Monday night and went immediately to the Guilford county jail to visit Mrs. Cynthia Decastros Hiatt, who has been held since police found their young son's body in an abandoned well beneath their home's porch on April 26.

He married Mrs. Hiatt in Trinidad in 1941 and came back to this country from where he shipped overseas in 1944. He last saw his young son, Tommy, just before going to Europe.

"It was quite a blow to me," he said, "when I received the news of the death of my son in Germany. I just couldn't believe it. And although I realize the seriousness of the tragedy, I am doing by my wife with the best of my ability.

"I love her now just as much as I ever did. No matter what the outcome of this horrible tragedy may be, I will always love her. Nothing can change that and I'll fight for her until the last.

"I am very grieved over the loss of my son, but I am thankful to God that I still have our daughter to make a future for."

He said he didn't plan to stay in Greensboro "if God will give me back my wife. I have too much respect for her to do that."

Hiatt soon will be discharged from the Army under the point system. He has 120 points to his credit.

According to Greensboro police, the 24-year-old mother said that after they had found the baby's body in the well of water, "I took the baby out of crib while he was sleeping and put him in the well. He was still asleep. Then I went back to his room, picked up a broom and began sweeping. Everything went black. I fell across the couch. I don't know whether I fainted or fell asleep. When I awoke I looked at the crib and started screaming."

Mrs. Hiatt told police that she put the child in the well because she feared that her sister-in-law and brother-in-law would take the child away from her. She said that her inlaws had kept the baby with them for 10 months. On April 5, Mrs. Hiatt was awarded custody of the child by order of the juvenile court.

The child's body was found in the well of water on April 26. Police said that first Mrs. Hiatt reported to them that he had been kidnapped. Their first child, Ann, born in Trinidad, was at a nursery school at the time of the alleged drowning of the boy.

Mrs. Hiatt said after her husband had visited her in jail that "he told me not to worry and that whatever happens we are going to see this thing through together."

After their meeting, she said that her husband momentarily turned his back and "that tears ran down his cheeks."

Middling spot, 22.55. (b-Bid.)

NEW ORLEANS, May 30.—(AP) Cotton futures maintained small net advances in late dealings here today. The gain was attributed to mill buying and short covering.

During the early part of the session prices declined 20 cents a bale under profit taking and hedge selling against recent government sales to the trade.

Sales to the public of 1944 crop by the Commodity Credit Corporation amounted to 168,950 bales, which was under the average expectation. The corporation had offered for sale approximately one million bales.

Trading was light due to the observance of national Memorial Day as a holiday by other markets throughout the nation. Late afternoon prices were unchanged to 15 cents a bale higher. July was at 23.00, October 22.65, December 22.55 and May 22.45.

Futures closed steady, unchanged to 15 cents a bale higher.

Members of the Atlanta Pilots Club, the Optimist Club and the Variety Club were present when the lights were turned on.

Mary Martin Past 'Critical Stage'

NEW YORK, May 30.—(INS)—Actress Mary Martin was reported late today to be "past the critical stage" of a severe illness following a premature birth caused by shock two weeks ago.

The premature birth was said to have followed the biting of her only child, Mary Heller Halliday, 3, by a dog in Huntington, W. Va.

Miss Martin's predicament was made more serious by difficulty in obtaining suitable blood transfusions. Her blood is of a type common to only 15 per cent of the population.

Transfusions from a blood bank were supplemented by donations from Actresses Ruth Bond and Judy Peterson, friends of Miss Martin, according to her husband, Richard Halliday, Hollywood script writer.

'GIVE GI A MEDAL'

McCormack Praised For Defending Soldier

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—Efforts of house Democratic Leader McCormack, of Massachusetts, in behalf of a soldier court-martialed for striking German war prisoners have brought him letters from "every state in the Union."

Last week McCormack demanded that the War Department review the case of Pvt. Joseph McGee, 23, of Worcester, Mass., sentenced to two years at hard labor by court-martial at Le Mans, France, in October, 1944.

McGee, whose sentence was terminated and dishonorable discharge revoked last Saturday by Undersecretary of War Patterson, was charged with kicking or punching nine prisoners near a stockade somewhere in France. He since has been restored to active duty.

Most of the more than 2,000 letters praised McCormack for his "fearless action" in asking that the soldier be set free. Some asked that McGee be given a medal for his actions.

A Kentucky man wrote:

"I wish to commend you for your prompt and vigorous action in this case. . . . The brass hats who sentenced him should be hauled up. . . . The boy should be given a medal instead of a sentence."

"Your action," said a Texas correspondent, "will speak sentiments of at least 98 per cent of us old Longhorn Texans."

"He did not do half enough," a New Hampshire writer said. "He should have blown a hole through them 10 inches in diameter."

From Nebraska came a letter which said:

"We are all sick of their atrocities and softness in return."

"I agree," said a Florida-based soldier, "that no man should be punished for anything he does to the Japs or Germans after the brutality of their soldiers against ours."

"He was sent to Europe to push the Germans around, wasn't he?" asked a Connecticut girl.

McCormack's aides said each of the letters would be answered.

TOUCHED OFF BY SERGEANT

Remagen Bridge Grab Heroic Comedy-Drama

By DON WHITEHEAD.

PARIS, May 30.—(AP)—Events which thrill the world and change the course of history sometimes are as comical as they are dramatic when the full story becomes known. Such was the case when the U. S. First Army's Ninth Armored Division seized the Remagen bridge and established an unexpected bridgehead across the Rhine.

All the story of that spectacular development in the last drive to defeat the German army was not told at the time, simply because all the facts did not become known until days after the gallant charge led by Sgt. Alexander A. Drabik, of Holland, Ohio, which captured the span.

The capture was not in the plans. Nobody expected it and Maj. Gen. John W. Leonard, commander of the Ninth Armored Division, found himself standing right in the middle of a history-making military operation which grew up like Topsy.

For months, the high command had been making plans on how and where to cross the Rhine. In brief, the First Army had begun to attack across the Roer river merely to protect the right flank of Lt. Gen. William H. Simpson's Ninth Army. Once on the Rhine, the First Army of Gen. Courtney H. Hodges was to stop while the Canadian, British and Ninth Armies massed their power for a grand crossing of the lower Rhine.

But Drabik's charge threw the army into turmoil, all the way up to supreme headquarters. And the army would have been in even greater turmoil had it known that, for the first 12 hours, the First Army was holding the bridgehead with one company of infantry.

Luckily the Germans were more confused than the Americans. Three companies of infantry went across the Remagen bridge that night of March 7, but for some unexplained reason two companies returned to the west bank.

The situation began to sort itself out the next day and troops and armor flowed across despite the fact that columns were snarled in one of the biggest traffic jams of the invasion.

When the order came down to exploit the bridgehead, everybody took to the roads at once. The confusion was magnificent to see. Columns were piled up for mile upon mile. An ordinary three-hour jeep ride stretched into seven or eight hours. As units were fed across the bridge, they were sent directly into action.

The situation reminded one of signs on the road near Maj. Gen. Terry Allen's 104th Division: "Front line 500 yards ahead. Dismount and begin fighting."

A few weeks after the Remagen bridgehead was seized, this correspondent sat with Gen. Leonard in his command post hearing him discuss the progress of the campaign and the fine work done by his Ninth Armored Division. He recalled the capture of the bridge and gave this version:

"That morning I sent out my combat teams toward the river, which was our objective. Late in the afternoon, one of my commanders called and said, 'General, we've got that bridge.'

"I said, 'What bridge?'

"He said, 'Why that big Ludendorff railroad bridge. We've got men across and we're holding a bridgehead across the Rhine.'

"And I said, 'Gosh, why did you do that! Now we'll all get in trouble.'"

One will always like the general for that story because his was such a normal reaction. But after that first uncertainty and when the high command gave the green light to exploit the bridgehead, Leonard's Ninth Armored Division distinguished itself many more times in daring exploits.

FIGHTING MEN BUY THEIR BOND SHARES

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—Here is a war bond statement from Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd Jr., commanding general of the Sixth Marine Division:

"The American fighting man is setting the example for the home folks as a war bond pay roll saver. He will do his part in buying extra war bonds in this Seventh War Loan."

Calvert

For those who know fine whiskey, Calvert is "the real thing." It has a pre-war quality and excellence that simply can't be imitated.

Perhaps that accounts for the fact that, year in and year out, people who sell and serve Calvert tell us: "It's the whiskey most often asked for by name."

We think that once you taste this gloriously smooth and mellow blend, you'll keep on asking for Calvert, too. It's America's finest whiskey from the House of Blends!
